POLICE HUNT MANIAC CHILD SLAYER

Little Louise Staula Killed by Man in Insane Fury, Detectives Say After Careful Study of Strange Crime—May Have Been a Negro Lunatic.

Little Louise Staula, the pretty six-year-old child who was slain while gathering flowers in the meadows near her Dedham home on Monday evening, was the victim of a person impelled to the act by maniacal fury.

No man or woman of normal mentality, the police declare, would have displayed such fiendish persistence in battering the head of the helpless little one and then have dragged the body over stones, brambles and briars, as did the perpetrator of this mad act.

When Chief of Police Drugan, accompanied by State Detectives James G. Brady and Thomas F. Eustace, had to-day made a minute examination of the ground where the crime was committed they reached the conclusion that the murder was that of a maniac. A search is being made for some one at large of unsound mind who might have killed the child.

ASSASSIN A NEGRO?

Evidence that the assassin was a negro has been obtained by the detectives who are working on the case. A colored man was seen on Monday near the scene of the murder. He acted in a strange manner and it is thought that his mind might have been affected.

The funeral of the child victim was held from her home this afternoon. The interment was in Brookdale Cemetery. Friends and playmates of the little girl took to her home bouquets of wild violets, the flowers for which the child was seeking when she met her violent death.

MOTHER CRIES FOR JUSTICE.

"I want justice—I want the fiend who killed my little girl found and punished. Poor little Louise! Oh, my poor little girl!" This was the cry of Mrs. Dominic Staula, the grief-stricken mother, to-day.

It was the mother who found the little girl lying face downward in the soft earth at the edge of Mother Brook, after a search of several hours. She grabbed the lifeless form in her arms and hurried with it to her home. She has been unable to suggest any reason for such an atrocious crime and cannot point her finger at anyone whom she would suspect.

WOMEN TELL OF NEGRO.

Mrs. Staula to-day told her story of the movements of her little daughter on the afternoon of the day she met her death and of her own movements while searching for the missing child. She went into detail which has not hitherto been published.

Chief of Police Drugan and Inspector Brown to-day interviewed two women who say that they saw a negro near the scene of the crime last Monday forenoon. The description they give of the colored man tallies with that of the man seen on last Saturday when Louise and three of her companions were frightened by him from the meadows.

Dominic Staula, the father of the murdered child, to-day told the police of having seen a man in a boat in Mother Brook, near the spot where the girl's body was found, at 9:30 o'clock on the evening the crime was committed.

MYSTERIOUS MAN IN BOAT.

"I was out looking for Louise," said Mr. Staula, "and had walked along the private road until I came to the bridge at Mother Brook. It was about 9:30 o'clock in the evening, and it was pretty dark.

"When I got to the bridge I was attracted by a sound of a man in the brook and looking down I saw him in a boat or raft.

"'How long have you been there?' I asked.

"'About ten minutes,' he replied.

"'Did you see anything of a little girl about here about seven years old?' I inquired.

"The man did not reply to this. I could not tell because of the darkness whether he was a white man or a colored man, but he was not an Italian. I crossed the bridge, and by the time I had returned to where I was when I talked with the man he had disappeared."

Mrs. Samuel H. Cooper of No. 189 Washington street, who lives about thirty yards from where the girl's body was found, when seen by a reporter of this newspaper to-day said:

SAW NEGRO BESIDE BROOK.

"I was standing in front of our house about 11 o'clock, Monday forenoon, when I saw a colored man in the private roadway which leads down to Mother Brook. The man was walking along aimlessly and occasionally stopping to pick up things. He was about five feet eight inches tall, of heavy build, had a black mustache and wore a black derby hat and black clothing."

Mrs. Charles Weberson, who lives about 125 yards from the place where the child was killed, said:

"I saw a colored man in the roadway leading from the meadows at 9 o'clock Monday morning. He was on his way toward Dedham, apparently from Boston. He did not seem to be in any particular hurry, but seemed to be wandering along in a sort of aimless manner.

"About 5:30 o'clock the same evening I remember that our dog Homer did considerable barking, and I believe now that it must have been caused by a strange man."

BRUISES ON CHILD'S FACE.

A reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN was allowed to-day to see the body of the dead child. He made a careful examination of the child's face and counted forty-two distinct bruises. One of the marks under the nose was especially distinct. The girl's hand and wrists were also lacerated as though they had been torn by stones or briars. These facts have led the police to believe that the child was stricken down some distance from the spot at which her body was found and that she was dragged face downward and left on the bank of Mother Brook.

Following are the theories that have been formed as to the perpetrator of the brutal crime:

That a woman with a superstitious mania slew the child in a frenzy.

That a boy who had been a playmate of the little girl, and who bore her enmity, killed her.

That a negro who had been reported as haunting the meadows was the murderer.

That a "Black Hand" enemy of the family was the perpetrator of the fearful act.

Mrs. Dominic Staula, Slain Girl's Mother Who Prays for Vengeance on Murderer

Since she found the body of her little girl, slain, Mrs. Staula has been almost frantic with grief.

SEN. MAHONEY'S HUNGER HALTS MERGERDEBATE

Lawrence's Argument Interrupted by Chicopee Man's Zeal for Lunch Counter.

Because Senator Dan Mahoney wanted "something to eat" and therefore refused to listen any longer to an argument against the proposed merger of the Boston & Maine road with New York, New Haven & Hartford system by William B. Lawrence of Medford, son of General Samuel Lawrence, the largest individual stockholder in the Boston & Maine, the legislative committee on railroads to-day shut off Mr. Lawrnce in the middle of this argument and postponed the hearing to some date to be fixed later. Senator Mahoney's hunger and his merger disinterestedness came on at 12:15 noon.

"How long is this argument goin' to go on?" he asked while Mr. Lawrence was in the middle of an expose of New Haven methods.

"As long as it is necessary for me to present reasons why this merger will be harmful to the people of the Commonwealth," answered Mr. Lawrence.

"All right," said the Senator from Chicopee, as he picked up his hat. "I'm goin' to get something to eat."

Mr. Lawrence said he would rather talk to a full committee, and Chairman Faxon, after consulting the other members, adjourned the hearing.

Urge Law Be Upheld.

At to-day's hearing the opponents of the proposed merger pointed out to the railroads committee that the paramount question now involved is whether or not the laws of the Commonwealth are to be maintained, and whether or not the Massachusetts Legislature is going to absolve the New Haven road from its express violation of the law.

Before the merger opposition opened its side of to-day's hearing, W. C. Dowse of the Reed & Barton Company of Taunton was given an opportunity to say that under proper restrictions by the State he would favor absorption of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven road.

Ex-Representative George L. Barnes of Weymouth, secretary of the Massachusetts Anti-Merger League, told the committee that the recent decision of the Supreme Court has taken the merger proposition beyond the mere unification of the two roads. "The question now is," he said, "whether the laws of the Commonwealth are to be maintained, or whether the Legislature is going to absolve a certain corporation from its violations of the law."

William B. Lawrence of Medford charged the commission on Commerce and Industry with working directly in the interest of the New Haven road. "What the commission has done and all that had been done with regard to this merger had been done in bad faith, so far as the public was concerned," he said.

Bickford's Plan for Road.

Engineer John H. Bickford of Boston presented to the committee a plan by which he believed the Commonwealth can exercise effective control over the stock of the Boston & Maine railroad without in any way entering upon State ownership

DETECTIVES PROBING HALL DEATH MYSTERY

RELATIVES INSIST THAT BODY OF DEAD WOMAN BE EXHUMED.

WORCESTER, May 13.—A New York detective engaged by Mrs. Cora Van Dyke of Gloversville, N. Y., sister of the dead woman, is making an investigation here and in South Londonderry, Vt., into the death mystery of Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall, who died February 20, and who is believed by relatives to have been poisoned.

Two officers of the State police, under District Attorney George S. Taft, are also making an investigation and it is believed that in response to the demand of the relatives the body of Mrs. Hall will be exhumed and search made for traces of poisoning. The District Attorney, however, does not believe exhumation would avail anything.

"There is no doubt that if they exhume the body traces of poisoning will be found," said Edward R. Bostwick, brother of Mrs. Hall, to-day, "and that is the only way the death mystery will ever be solved. We shall insist upon the body being taken up."

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Boston, May 13.—The Red Sox tackled the Detroit champions again this afternoon. In order to win from the Tigers you have to out-ginger them. Ginger got them the pennant last season. With two batters, one pitcher and an unlimited supply of ginger they conned their way through the schedule and landed on top.

Nobody except themselves expects them to win another American League flag, but if they do it will be mostly ginger that does it.

The Red Sox cannot understand why they don't win more games. The answer is simple: They don't drive in enough runs. They have had plenty of chances to win every game they have lost, but the necessary wallops are not forthcoming. The fact that they are beaten by small scores shows that their pitchers are working as well as can be expected, but five runs in five games are not enough to climb out of last place.

There is no doubt the boys can hit, but they are not hitting now. The only thing the fans can do is to wait patiently until they find their batting eyes.

Another fine baseball day greeted the players when they came out on the field for practice. A few more days like this and there will be no excuse for sore arms.

With Hugh Jennings, "Silk" O'Loughlin and the champion Tigers for attractions there was another large gathering. The fans expected a lively game with this combination on deck. Jennings got busy on the coaching lines the minute the battle began, but he kept one eye on the umpire and was careful not to overstep the bounds at the start.

Deacon McGuire beseeched his men to do a little batting. "We must hit the ball harder to win," he said. "Now get after 'em."

FOR JAPANESE ARBITRATION

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Senate committee on foreign relations to-day authorized a favorable report on the treaty of arbitration with Japan, which is similar to those recently ratified with the eleven European countries.

ROOSEVELT HURLS "DEFI" AT CONGRESS

SAYS HE WILL PERPETUATE WATERWAYS COMMISSION IN ANY EVENT.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—President Roosevelt hurled defiance at Congress to-day, and breaking away from the speech which he had prepared for delivery at the White House congerence of Governors for the purpose of conserving the natural resources of the country, he declared with emphasis that if Congress failed to heed his request for money to perpetuate the Inland Waterways Commission, he would himself take steps to perpetuate the commission. The President's announcement was received with cheers by the Governors and delegates.

"I was compelled to bring this commission into existence myself," said the President. "I asked Congress to appropriate a sufficient amount of money for that purpose. Congress did not see fit to do so. Now I have asked Congress for a sufficient sum of money to perpetuate the Inland Waterways Commission. If Congress does not appropriate the money I will perpetuate the commission myself."

Cheers Follow Utterance.

The President was interrupted by the cheers and applause which greeted his frank avowal of defiance. As soon as it had subsided the President added:

"Of course it would be better for Congress to act, but if it does not I will perpetuate the commission."

The conference was summoned to consider in the abstract the broad questions of forestry, land reclamation, irrigation, mining, sanitation and the like, every source of natural wealth that contributes in any way to the industrial and social life of the nation. It has already been announced that no direct pressure will be brought to bear on Congress for the enactment of legislation in any way relating to the subjects to be discussed.

Immediately after the opening of the session to-day organization was perfected by the selection of Thomas R. Shipp of the forest service as general secretary and Dr. W. J. McGee, secretary of the Inland Waterways Commission, as recording secretary.

The President's Address.

President Roosevelt, in addressing the conference, said in part:

I welcome you to this conference at the White House. You have come hither at my request so that we may join together to consider the question of the conservation and use of the great fundamental sources of wealth of this Nation. So vital is this question that for the first time in our history the chief executive officers of the States separately, and of the States together forming the Nation, have met to consider it.

This conference on the conservation of natural resources is in effect a meeting of the representatives of all the people of the United States called to consider the weightiest problem now before the nation; and the occasion for the meeting lies in the fact that the natural resources of our country are in danger of exhaustion if we permit the old wasteful methods of exploiting them longer to continue.

I have asked you to come together now because the enormous consumption of these resources, and the threat of imminent exhaustion of some of them, due to reckless and wasteful use, once more calls for common effort, common action.

Minerals Gave Us Great Riches.

The discovery and utilization of mineral fuels and alloys have given us the lead over all other nations in the production of steel. The discovery and utilization of coal and iron have given us our railways and have led to such industrial development as has never before been seen. The vast wealth of lumber in our forests, the riches of our soils and mines, the discovery of gold and mineral oils, combined with the efficiency of our transportation, have made the conditions of our life unparalleled in comfort and convenience.

The steadily increasing drain on these natural resources has promoted to an extraordinary degree the complexity of our industrial and social life. It is safe to say that the prosperity of our people depends directly on the energy and intelligence with which our natural resources are used. It is equally clear that these resources are the final basis of national power and perpetuity. Finally, it is ominously evident that these resources are in the course of rapid exhaustion.

The son of a farmer of to-day must make his living on his father's farm. There is no difficulty in doing this if the father will exercise wisdom. No wise use of a farm exhausts its fertility. So with the forests. We are over the verge of a timber famine in this country, and it is unpardonable for the nation or the States to permit and further cutting of our timber save in accordance with a system which will provide that the next generation shall see the timber increased instead of diminished. Moreover, we can add enormous tracts of the most valuable possible agricultural land to the national domain by irrigation in the arid and semi-arid regions and by drainage of great tracts of swamp land in the humid regions.

We can enormously increase our transportation facilities by the canalization of our rivers so as to complete a great system of waterways on the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts and in the Mississippi valley, from the Great Plains to the mouth of the mighty Father of Waters.

Problem of National Efficiency.

Finally, let us remember that the conservation of our natural resources, though the gravest problem of to-day, is yet but part of another and greater problem to which this nation is not yet awake, but to which it will awake in time, and with which it must hereafter grapple if it is to live—the problem of national efficiency, the patriotic duty of insuring the safety and continuance of the nation.

When the people of the United States consciously undertake to raise themselves as citizens, and the nation and the States in their several spheres, to the highest pitch of excellence in private, state and national life, and to do this because it is the first of all the duties of true patriotism, then and not till then the future of this nation, in quality and in time, will be assured.

CHELSEA CLASH OVER BUILDING

Declaring that the building is being erected in violation of a ruling by Mayor Beck of Chelsea which forbids the erection of a permanent structure until some agreement has been reached regarding new buildings, Building Inspector Walter Batchelder of Chelsea to-day served notice on J. T. Nelson that work must be stopped immediately on the structure now being erected on Broadway on the grounds that it is a permanent building, while the permit calls only for a temporary one.

Nelson replied to the Building Department that he was within the law. He refused to discontinue the work.

Penikese Island Girl Leper, Weeping, Driven In Exile from America

BERTHA OSSIS OF BROOKLINE, AFTER SECRET TRIP, PLACED ON STEAMER FOR RUSSIA.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 13.—When the schooner yacht Romano weighed anchor off City Island to-day and shoved her way down East River, a girl sat on deck, lounging back in an easy chair, and no one came near her or talked with her. The crew of the vessel passed her at a distance and worked among the sails. Occasionally a sailor glanced back at her, muttering, "Leper. She has the living death."

The girl was Bertha Ossis, being brought from Penikese Island, Mass, to be put on board a steamship sailing from Weehawken and taken back to her home in Russia.

Crews and passengers on passing boats looked curiously at the trim yacat and its single passenger. No tug was willing to tow the yacht around the battery, and she moved slowly, tacking in and among the hundreds of vessels. The authorities did not permit the girl to be landed at the docks. The steamship backed out into the mid-stream, and the girl was transferred from the yacht.

Flee Cry of "Leper."

Boatmen had already carried the word down the bay from City Island that the lone woman who sat with a sunshade over her was a leper. When the Romano dropped anchor off City Island yesterday afternoon scores of small boats were plying about in the water. Some of them drew close and pushed their grimy noses against the sides of the yacht offering a tow to a pier or anchorage.

"Leper!" shouted the man at the helm, and the small boats scurried off. Soon the vicinity was almost free of boats and it became impossible to get a tow down the bay.

Miss Bertha Ossis, a good-looking girl, is the leper. On her arrival in this country from Russia she had no trouble in passing the immigration authorities. Possibly her disease had not developed then so that it was noticeable. She went to Brookline, Mass., and there white blotches appeared on her face. These were unmistakably leprosy, and she was hurried to the Massachusetts leper colony on Penikese Island. There she has been for several months.

Hire Yacht to Transport Her.

It was not for the United States authorities to care for the Russian leper, but it was no easy matter to get this girl back in her native country. The steamship company that brought her here would have to take her back, but it was impossible for a time to get her to New York. No railroad would accept her as a passenger and no steamship would permit her on board.

Then the immigration authorities almost decided to buy a small vessel and bring her to New York. The suggestion was made that the Romano be chartered. Captain Robert B. Chase, an old New Bedford skipper, and Dr. Hardy, a surgeon of the United States Hospital in Massachusetts, are the only Americans on board. The yacht is in charge of Captain Oliverra, who has no fear of the disease. However, Captain Oliverra remains at the helm of the boat and Captain Chase and Dr. Hardy have kept at a safe distance from Miss Ossis at all times.

Lived in Old Voting Booth.

Miss Ossis came to New York from Courland, Russia, three years ago, and got a home in the family of Walter L. Lane in the fashionable colony at Brookline, Mass. An anonymous letter reached the Massachusetts State Board of Health on August 23 last which declared that Miss Ossis was a leper. A doctor was sent to examine her, but she evaded him and went to the hospital. Even the doctors recoiled when they learned why she had come and for months she was isolated.

For a time the girl lived in an old voting booth, and everyone was warned not to approach the miserable hut. In this booth with Miss Ossis was another young woman, Lucy Patterson, similarly afflicted, herself a Russian girl from the same district. Miss Ossis made herself content with her sister in affliction, but government officials determined to deport her, as doctors said she was a leper when she was admitted. The steamship company was then ordered by the federal officials to take her back home. While the arrangements for her passage were being made she has been on Penikese, fourteen miles out in Buzzards Bay.

Begs to Be Left on Island.

Miss Ossis was a most unwilling passenger when put aboard the yacht. She explained that her own country would not want her, that she would be turned back from Russia. She wept bitterly at parting from the other woman leper, and begged to stay on the island.

"There is no question about your having leprosy?" Miss Ossis was asked by a reporter who drew up alongside the boat.

"That is it," she said without so much as a falter in her voice, and pointing to a white spot on her neck no larger than a ten-cent piece. "It will not harm you," she added, "but keep back. Keep back."

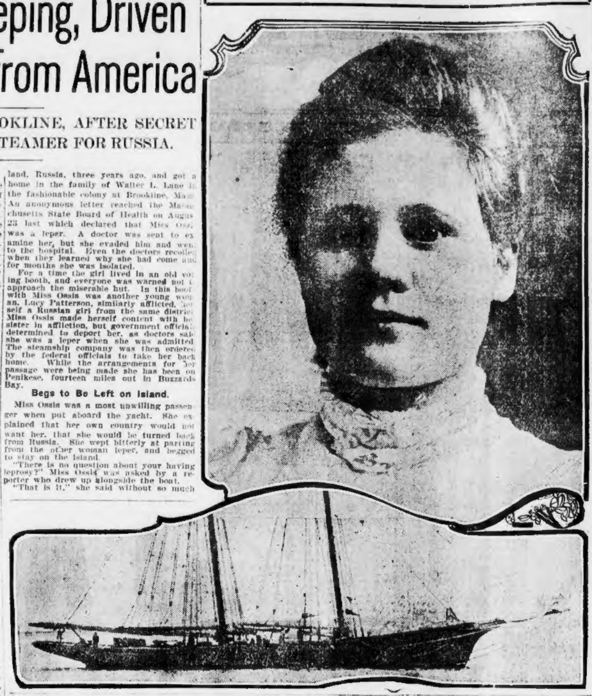
"I do not want to go back to Russia," she added. "What do I go there for? They say it is my home. It is my end."

Then the girl smiled weakly and waved her hand, calling out, "Good bye, good bye."

Miss Ossis occupied the magnificent saloon on the Romano, fitted up when she flew the burgee of the New York Yacht Club. The yacht was at one time the Resolute, flying the colors of A. S. Hatch. It later was bought by Captain Oliverre, and has been plying between Providence, New Bedford and the Cape de Verde Islands.

GIRL LEPER EXILED TO RUSSIA.

Bertha Ossis, Brookline girl, returned to her former home in Courland, Russia; yacht Ramona, which carried her to New York.



MAYOR PLANS LODGING HOUSE COMMISSION

Asks Five Prominent Settlement Workers to Serve on New Board.

WOULD REMEDY EVILS

Mayor Hibbard signaled his return from the conference of charities and corrections at Richmond by asking five prominent settlement workers of the city to-day to become members of a lodging house commission to investigate lodging house conditions and make recommendations for their regulation. Misses Maude M. Rothwell and Mary Boyle O'Reilly, who have made an exhaustive study of lodging house conditions in the great lodging house district of the South End, will be the women members of the commission. Robert A. Woods, head of the South End house, and Meyer Bloomfield, head of the Civic Service House in the North End, are understood to be two others who have been asked to serve.

"The lodging house question has been in my mind for years," said the Mayor today. "When a person seeks a lodging place in Boston he or she should be able to know whether the house is morally clean and clean also from a sanitary standpoint. There are over 75,000 lodgers in Boston, of whom 50,000 live in the South End. The conditions surrounding this army of people should be a subject of careful study. I expect much good will come from the work of the commission."

The Mayor announced that he will appoint Mrs. Edward H. Atherton of No. 82 Ruthven street, Roxbury, as a member of the board of trustees of children's institutions, to succeed Mrs. George F. H. Murray, who has resigned. Mrs. Atherton is the wife of Edward H. Atherton, master at the Girls' Latin School.

No decision has been reached by the Mayor as to the appointment of two trustees of pauper institutinos. He may reappoint Thomas A. McQuade, whose term expired April 30. The Mayor is considering several candidates for the place on the health board now held by Michael W. Norris.

"THE" ALLEN SLAIN BY POISON DRAUGHT?

POLICE START INVESTIGATION INTO DEATH OF FAMOUS POOLROOM KING.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The district attorney's office, through Coroner Julius Harburger, to-day took the preliminary steps looking toward a thorough investigation into the facts leading up to the death of "The" Allen, the poolroom king, who died last night at his Eighth street home.

"The" Allen, known for fifteen years as the American gambler, and characterized by Theodore Roosevelt as the wickedest man in New York, had been ill for a long time. His malady was locomotor ataxia. Recently he offered $20,000 for a cure.

During the past week Allen not only suffered greatly from his incurable disease, but was mentally deranged, according to attendants and physicians who were called in.

Last night Allen suddenly took a turn for the worse and was found unconscious in his bed, by a nurse shortly after 8 o'clock. Death followed shortly.

Start Investigation.

On being acquainted with the facts, the District Attorney's office notified Coroner Harburger to investigate the cause of death, as certain persons had intimated to the authorities that death had not come naturally.

Coroner Harburger immediately refused to issue a death certificate and an informal inquest was held at the Allen home last night. Every member of the gambler's family, nurses, attendants, physicians and various friends were closely questioned. At the conclusion of the inquest the coroner ordered the body removed to an undertaker's pending an autopsy to-day.

Just what will be developed during the course of the autopsy can only be surmised, but it has been asserted by the close relatives of the dead gambler that poison will be found in the man's vital organs. Acting on the suggestions offered by the relatives, Coroner Harburger and the District Attorney's office will co-operate in a searching investigation of the case.

Leaves Large Estate.

Allen leaves a large estate, mostly in real estate and cash in various banks.

When President Roosevelt was police commissioner of New York "The" Allen was in the heyday of his success as a gambler. Within a stone's throw of the police headquarters, Allen maintained a gambling house which he had so protected that police raids became wrecking parties.

Rams were used in battering down Allen's front doors, and on account of the inaccessibility of the place and Allen's defiance of the law he was characterized by Roosevelt as the wickedest man in New York." He had been arrested more than three hundred times.

Allen was a veteran of the Civil War and his father was a Methodist minister.

Allen leaves an adopted daughter, his wife having died in 1903 of heart failure after hearing that her husband had been arrested for the 268th time.

SEIZE CARGO OF AGUARDIENTE

NEW BEDFORD, May 13.—The Portuguest packet A. W. Whyland, which reached port this morning, was seized by the customs house officers, who found a large quantity of aguardiente on board, skilfully hidden in a dark corner of the hold. The craft will be held until the captain can be given a hearing before United States Commissioner Alexander McL. Goodspeed on a smuggling charge.

The packet came into the lower harbor early this morning and found that the revenue cutter Dexter was lying in wait for her and all other packets due from the islands. The Dexter sent a boarding party on the Whyland, and when the sailors got on board the packet they found that there was no manifest of the cargo.

REUNION AT ST. PATRICK'S

Arrangements are completed for the annual reunion of the past and present parishioners, old and young, of St. Patrick's Church, Dudley street, Roxbury, to be held this evening in Paul Revere and Talbot halls. It is expected that there will be a record-breaking attendance.

From 8 to 9 o'clock there will be an entertainment of vocal and instrumental music. John Quigley, the famous newsboy tenor, will be among the talent. Whist will be played in another part of the building.

The Rev. Maurice F. Flynn, an energetic curate attached to the parish, is in charge of the affair. He is ably assisted by Alderman James M. Curley as chairman of the general committee and Dr. Peter F. Fleming as secretary.

LANAO GOVERNOR DIES OF WOUNDS

MANILA, May 13.—Allen Gard, Governor of Lanao, is dead here as a result of bolo wounds inflicted by Moros. He underwent a series of unsuccessful operations. Governor Gard came here in 1901 as a school teacher, having been nominated by Yale University. His father is a resident of New York city and a business man in Wall street.

GOVERNOR GUILD HAS HOUR'S DRIVE

Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., is visiting at the home of E. A. Grozier, No. 168 Brattle street, North Cambridge. The Governor enjoyed an hour's drive to-day in company with Mr. Grozier, and on his return reported that his strength was returning so rapidly that he expected to be able to assume his duties in a few days.

INVESTIGATION ASKED BY SON OF SIRE'S DEATH

Mystery Surrounding Alleged Suicide of Life-Long Resident of Palmer.

PALMER, May 13.—Mystified by the many strange facts surrounding his death, relatives of Myron L. Pike, a life-long resident of Monson and Palmer, declared to have committed suicide at the home of Mrs. Etta L. Soper, in the village of Hampden, a week ago to-day, are determined that a thorough investigation be made.

They declare that there was absolutely no reason why he should want to take his own life, that he was in no trouble and on the day before his death was busily engaged in making plans for a number of houses which he had contracted to build.

A short time before his death, Mr. Pike gave a bill of sale of some of his personal effects to Mrs. Soper. This was produced by the landlady of the house in which Mr. Pike died when Charles W. Pike, son of the dead man, endeavored to secure among other things, a very valuable gold watch owned by his father.

Son Demands Probe.

"I want this matter probed to the bottom," the son said to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "I know the medical examiner says that my father committed suicide, but so many strange facts have come up that I, as well as my sisters and relatives of my father, want to have them cleared up before we will be satisfied.

"My sisters are prostrated because of his strange death and they have appealed to me to do everything that can be done to clear up this mystery. None of us can understand it.

"When I first went to the house after receiving word that my father was dead, I was unable to learn much about the manner of his death. All that they could tell me was that he had shot himself while alone in his chamber on the second floor.

"No one could tell me any reason for it. He gave them no intimation, they told me, that he was tired of living and not one scrap of writing did he leave behind.

"Then, when I asked for his things, especially the gold watch which he had promised me years ago, I was shown a bill of sale by Mrs. Soper.

"She told me that my father had several times tried to have her take the watch, but that she had refused it until he pressed it upon her and gave her a bill of sale, she said because he wanted to do it that way.

Scouts Suicide Verdict.

"I don't want to dispute the findings of the Medical Examiner, but I don't believe that there has been sufficient investigation made of the facts leading up to his death. I cannot believe that he took his own life without some great provocation or that he knew what he was doing."

Mr. Pike was fifty-five years of age, in perfect physical health and looked much younger, died from the effects of a bullet fired from a small revolver owned by Mrs. Soper. The weapon was held so close to the head that the hair on the right side was badly burned and the ball penetrated the brain.

The deed was committed while Mrs. Soper, her four children and Mark Butler, another lodger, were about to have breakfast in the dining room on the first floor.

PRIEST'S SLAYER CONFESSES CRIME

ROME, May 13.—Dispatches from Tripoli state to-day that the Turk who confessed himself the murderer of Father Guiliano, the missionary, has been arrested at Derna. The assassin declares that he was urged by others to commit the crime. This has led the police to think that a plot existed.

TORNADO KILLS FIFTEEN; MANY HOMES RUINED

Lives of Several Men Snuffed Out in Sandpit Where They Fled from the Storm.

OMAHA, Neb., May 13.—Fifteen to eighteen persons were killed and more than a dozen seriously injured, according to reports being received to-day of the havoc wrought by the tornado which swept Omaha and the country to the South.

The greatest loss of life is reported at Louisville, where Mrs. Frank Hester was killed in her home and seven men met death in a sand pit in which they had sought safety. In addition two unidentified men were killed.

At Fort Crook several of the barracks buildings were damaged by the wind. No deaths resulted, however.

At Bellevlew about $50,000 damage was done to the college buildings. Near Richfield, Charles Leader, fourteen, was killed.

Reports from Louisville indicate that half of the town was wrecked.

Near Papillion, Martin Tighe and his son were driving. The storm picked up the buggy, threw it into a ditch and pinned the men beneath the wreckage in such a manner that both were drowned.

La Platte is reported demolished, but no direct information can be secured.

Shocking outbursts of crazy religious fanatics. The death torture of little Rena Smith as a human sacrifice of the "Devil Chasers"; crucifixion of a pretty young wife by her fanatic husband. Burned herself to death at the stake, like Joan of Arc. No Angel of the Lord stayed the hand of this modern Abraham. A baby "Jonah" thrown to the waves by its nurse to save the ship. THERE WON'T BE ANY WAR, SAYS EVANS

'Yankees and Japs Too Patient,' Says the Admiral on His Way East.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, "Fighting Bob," arrived in Chicago to-day on his way through from San Francisco to Washington, accompanied by a party that included his family and a few friends. He arrived over the Northwestern Railroad on the private car Sunset, which was transferred to the Pennsylvania train that left this afternoon at 3:15 for the East. Admiral Evans did not leave the private car during the stopover in Chicago except to take a walk around the depot.

"They won't let me work much," he said, as he sat with his legs thrown over the arm of a chair in a corner of the car.

"How's the fleet?" somebody asked.

"Great; it's fine and fit; the men are all wool and a yard wide, and it's better now than it ever was, and it's getting better every day."

"And the war talk?"

"Take it from me," said the Admiral, "there won't be any war. You know that as well as I do. We've got too much patience and so has Japan."

In the party with Rear-Admiral Evans and his wife were his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Marsh; Lieutenant F. T. Evans, his son; Lieutenant C. R. Train, flag lieutenant; Lieutenant Commander L. H. Chandler, Lieutenant W. R. Gherardi and Surgeon P. E. McDonald.

COTTON FEEDS $600 BLAZE

Twenty-four bales of cotton were destroyed and the big freight shed No. 2 was threatened by a stiff blaze this noon at the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company docks, Sleepr street, oSuth Boston. The origin of the fire is unknown. The damage was $600. The cotton was owned by Barry, Thayer & Co.

LAMPHERE DESCRIBES TRAGEDIES

Mrs. Gunness's Accomplice Declares She Is Still Living.

CONFESSES THE CRIMES

BALTIMORE, Md., May 13.—Declaring himself thoroughly convinced that Mrs. Belle Gunness still lives and that the Laporte authorities will be unable to show any body found in the ruins of her burned charnal house to be that of the woman accused of wholesale murders, the Rev. E. A. Schell, pastor of the chief Methodist church in Laporte, Ind., to-day, told the BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent of Ray Lamphere's statement to him.

"Of course," said Dr. Schell, "Lamphere helped to kill the children. They were chloroformed and then the house was fired. I do not know who the woman was whose body has led many to believe Mrs. Gunness perished in the flames."

"Did Lamphere have anything to do with the other murders Mrs. Gunness committed?" was asked of the pastor.

"I am sure he was innocent of all save that of Helgelein. He was very jealous of Helgelein,' answered Dr. Schell.

"Did he confess to the murder of Helgelein?" was the question.

"The Man Is Guilty."

"I cannot answer that question. The man is as guilty as man can be, but I want him to have a fair show. I used my influence to have a lawyer appointed to his case. The statement he has undoubtedly made to the prosecuting attorney by this time will make this only a matter of form, but I feel that he should have that much of a show."

Then the pastor told of Lamphere's coming to him.

"He was in a pitiable condition on the day I saw him and heard his statements. He was finally convinced that he would be killed. He was trying to nerve himself for the end. When I talked with him he broke down and poured out his dreadful story. I do not know whether he told me all, but he told me enough. I advised him at once to make his statement to the prosecuting attorney.

Lamphere a Moral Degenerate.

"Lamphere sent for me. I do not know the man at all. He is a moral degenerate and inclined to all excesses. He used to come into town every few weeks with a large amount of money, which Mrs. Gunness had given him, and would go on a protracted spree.

"On one of these occasions he lost some $50 to $60 playing slot machines. I made a complaint and the slot machines were taken out. Lamphere heard of my efforts and I suppose he felt that I had a certain sort of interest in his welfare. At any rate, this is the reason he sent for me.

"Lamphere had been in jail four days when I received his statement, a week ago last Friday. I was obliged to come East and saw him only once afterward, when I took him a copy of the Bible with some paragraphs marked. He seemed eager to have me select these passages."

Ever since the first day of the prisoner's incarceration the clergyman has been a visitor at his cell. For hours at a time he has been locked in with the man who might carry the secret with him to the gallows. Upon the report of the clergyman the investigators have builded their case. All that Lamphere told him has not been revealed, but enough of his admissions to give the framework upon which the decision has been reached became public.

The man has been cautioned by his legal counsel to avoid giving any information concerning his knowledge or his actions upon the night of the disappearance of Andrew Helgelein, the last victim of the alleged murderers; his observations upon that and later occasions and his actions upon the night of the fire, which cost the lives of the woman and her three children.

A Walking Arsenal.

An interesting sidelight on the character of Mrs. Gunness has been furnished by Mrs. C. O. Lapham of Laporte, who for six years was a neighbor, of the woman. Mrs. Lapham says that on the only occasion on which she called upon her neighbor, her hostess sat near an open window.

A strong breeze through this opening blew aside the folds of a loose house dress which Mrs. Gunness was wearing, and revealed about her body a belt containing pouches of various sizes and sheaths which seemed to have been constructed for knives.

Shocking outbursts of crazy religious fanatics. The death torture of little Rena Smith as a human sacrifice of the "Devil Chasers"; crucifixion of a pretty young wife by her fanatic husband. Burned herself to death at the stake, like Joan of Arc. No Angel of the Lord stayed the hand of this modern Abraham. A baby "Jonah" thrown to the waves by its nurse to save the ship. Told in next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

AMHERST JUNIOR HERO LOSES LIFE ON RIVER

STUDENT DIES IN ATTEMPT TO SAVE LIFE OF COMRADE ON CANOE TRIP.

AMHERST, Mass., May 13.—George Hewit Plough of New York city, an Amherst College junior, was drowned in the Connecticut River at Hadley yesterday. Plough deliberately sacrificed his own life to save that of his companion and classmate, Hubert B. Goodrich of Auburndale. They were in a canoe that overturned and Plough struck out for the shore to get aid for Goodrich.

The cold water caused cramps and he sank after proceeding a few yards. The body has not been recovered. Plough was a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity.

WOMEN PASS THROUGH HUB ON AUTO TRIP

In a two-cylinder, eight-horsepower runabout Mrs. E. E. Teape and her daughter, Mrs. Vera MacKelvie of Sand Point, Idaho, arrived in Boston to-day from Newburyport on their 4,000-mile automobile trip from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore. They had dinner at a hotel and left shortly afterward for Albany, where they expect to arrive this evening.

Leaving Albany to-morrow morning, the women will go up through central New York and among the places they will visit are Syracuse, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, Davenport, Omaha Cheyenne and Salt Lake City. They expect to finish the trip by July 9. Mrs. Teape operates the car.

The tourists intend to travel only during the day. They will stop wherever night overtakes them. The journey will be by slow stages, and the trip is undertaken for the benefit of Mrs. MacKelvie's health. The women carry with them a letter from the Mayor of Portland, Maine, to the Mayor of Portland, Oregon.

BIG CLOTHING BARGAINS AT HARRISON'S

There is a big clothing sale in progress at the store of S. H. Harrison Company, at Nos. 660-672 Washington street, and the public have thronged there in such numbers because of the bargains advertised that many extra salespeople have been employed to take care of the rush trade. Business has been so brisk there that the management has had to ask patrons, in order to give everybody adaquate service, to come as early in the day as possible.

The S. H. Harrison Company has purchased from Hirshberg & Rubins the latter's entire stock of men's, young men's and boys' clothing at very low prices. Thirty big cases of goods have already been delivered to the Harrison store as the result of the trade, and the garments they contain are being offered at half and less than half price. The sale is on to-day and will be continued Friday and Saturday.

The Harrison Company say that the clothing, which came from the establishment of one of the largest high-grade houses in New York, is being offered at prices making the greatest bargains ever known in Boston.

The clothing is in the latest Spring styles of brown, olive and smoke shades. The fabrics are worsteds, velours, fancy Scotch tweeds, besides many of other varieties.

BESSIE JOHNSON SEEKS DIVORCE

CLEVELAND, O., May 13.—Mrs. Elizabeth Flournoy Mariani, better known as Bessie Johnson, daughter of Cleveland's Mayor, has filed suit for divorce here against Frederico Mariani of New York, whom she married little more than a year ago. Mariani is accused of abandonment, gross neglect and extreme cruelty.

Mrs. Mariani asks for an absolute divorce, alimony and the custody of their baby, Margaret Evelyn, five months old. On this point at least, it is reported, Mariani will evince strong opposition, and will utilize such rights as he can, being an Italian subject.

$1,250,000 IN PITTSBURG BANK STEAL

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 13.—A sensational chapter was added to the Allegheny National Bank scandal here to-day when George E. Tener, the rich manufacturer, who was bondsman for William Montgomery, the defaulting cashier, turned Montgomery over to the United States authorities, withdrawing his bail.

Tener made this move on hearing that Montgomery had announced that he would commit suicide and on being informed by the national bank examiner, William L. Folds, that the defalcations of Montgomery would reach at least $1,250,000.

The United States authorities then decided to increase Montgomery's bail to $100,000, and the cashier, with the prospect of jail before him, was examined for four hours in the office of the United States District Attorney.

Richard R. Quay, son of the former United States Senator, then entered bail for $50,000, and Mr. Tener finally renewed his bail of $50,000.

For the first time since his defalcation was discovered Montgomery unbosomed himself during the four hours that he was in charge of the officials. In the presence of witnesses he told a part of the story of the looting of the bank.

The only part of the confession given out to-day by Bank Examiner Folds was that Montgomery had exonerated all the politicians whose names have been brought into the case. He also gave information which will probably result in the arrest of several persons.

Examiner Folds stated that although the defalcation of Montgomery would reach $1,250,000 and probably more, the capital of the bank is intact. About $300,000 has been recovered on notes and bonds.

POLICE CATCH ALLEGED YEGG

Joy street station police say that Paul Richter, alias William Gordon, is a yeggman with a prison record, and he is under arrest charged with the larceny of $15 from the postoffice at East Holliston and several watches, a razor and other goods from unknown persons.

Richter, who refuses to give any information about himself, was arrested last night by Patrolman Dudley after an exciting chase. The policeman saw him go into a Green street auction room and tried to arrest him when he attempted to sell the watches there. Richter ran into Green street and then into Norman street with the policeman at his heels. He was finally caught in a closet in the house at No. 31 Norman street. The police say he has been an associate of "Eddie" Sprague, a notorious yeggman, and in 1904 was sentenced to two and one-half years in prison.

MOTHER WHO FOUND CHILD SLAIN CRIES FOR JUSTICE

That a man regarded as mentally unbalanced, whose home is in the neighborhood of the Staulas', committed the crime.

WOMAN'S ARTICLES FOUND.

That the act was that of a woman is somewhat borne out by articles of woman's wear that were picked up near the scene of the tragedy and also by the statement of Medical Examiner A. H. Hodgdon, who declared that he did not think that the blows were struck by the hand of a strong man.

Found near the place where the little girl's body lay face downward at the edge of Mother Brook were a lady's handkerchief, a lady's comb, a hair pin, and a scrap of paper upon which appeared what apparently was part of a woman's name.

An imprint of the shoe with a rubber sole was found in a number of places near the spot where the body lay. This shoe was too small for a man and it is believed by those who investigated the case that the footprint was made either by a woman or a boy.

Medical Examiner Hodgdon pointed out that the blows on the skull of the child showed the fury of persistence rather than strength. It is believed that whoever killed the child was worked up to such a frenzy that he or she did not realize the point in the desperate attack at which the victim had been fatally injured, but continued to rain blows after the little girl lay unconscious on the ground.

STORIES CONTRADICTORY.

In questioning the children, the police found discrepancies in the stories related by Celia Di Vresc and Fred Noifi. Celia said when she and Louise were on their way to the head of the private road, Fred Noifi from his yard called out:

"Where are you going?"

"We're going to pick flowers," answered Louise.

"I'm not going," said Celia.

"I guess you don't like flowers very much," replied Louise as she left.

When Chief Drugan and Detective Scott asked Fred Noifi about Louise he said he had not seen her since Saturday, and he persisted in this statement.

Members of the Staula family, while they admit that they had talked to Louise about the "Black Hand" in order to frighten her away from the meadows, can suggest no reason why any one would want to wreak vengeance upon the household by slaying the child.

FLED DOWN RAILROAD TRACK.

A reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN found a blood stain on the fence which separated the field from the railroad, which was called to the attention of the police. They now believe that the assassin made his escape from the field by crossing the fence to the railroad and then going toward Boston. Residents along this route as well as section hands employed on that division of the railroad were to-day questioned as to what they might have observed on Monday evening in the neighborhood of 5:30 o'clock.

It is believed that the child was killed in the vicinity of 5:30 and not later than 6 o'clock. The exact movements of the little girl on the evening she met her awful fate have been traced by the police. Louise reached home at 4.30 p. m., told her mother she was going to get Celia Di Vresc to accompany her after wild flowers, but the mother said she would punish her if she went down to the "island," as the knoll is called, without Celia. Louise persuaded Celia to start with her, but after they walked down to the private road Celia decided not to go, and walked over to the yard of the Noifi house, leaving Louise to wander down the road alone.

CELIA DI VRESC'S STORY.

The Di Vresc girl places the time at about 4:45 p. m. by the passage of the train which leaves Dedham at 4:42 and the passing of the train from Boston due at Dedham at 4:49. During this intervening period Louise started down the private road. For some fifteen minutes after that Celia was playing in the Noifi yard, swinging, and though this yard is the nearest to the entrance to the private road, she heard no cry from Louise.

Celia Di Vresc, who last saw her alive, says:

"I have known Louisa Staula a long time and she and I went everywhere together. Last Saturday I left the house about 9 o'clock in the morning and called for Louisa. We played around Washington street for a few hours and then I went to my dinner."

"In the afternoon I again called for her and she said 'let's go and get some flowers.' We went and got Louisa's sister Pauline and Sadie Noifi and started for the woods. This was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

"We had been there about ten minutes when a black man jumped out from behind some bushes and started for us. He said: 'I'll kill one of you; I'll kill one of you.' Louisa was the nearest to him, but we al started to run."

"We ran over across the railroad track and he kept following us. We began to scream and when we looked back again the man had turned and was running back to the bushes. I am sure that he said two or three times that he would kill one of us.

"I am sure that I never saw the man before, but I think I could tell him if I ever saw him again."

'When I got home I did not say anything to my mother about it because I was afraid to."

"Sunday I saw Louise for a little while and we went to get some more flowers, but we did not go to the same place, but upon the hills.

"On Monday morning I first saw Louise as I was going to school. I did not see her again to speak to until school let out at 4 o'clock. Then we walked home together.

"A little before 5 o'clock Louisa came over to my house and asked me to go pick flowers with her. We started and she led the way to the place where we saw the black man last Saturday. I was afraid to go there and told Louisa so, but she said 'come on,' so I went."

"We had been there a little while and I again told Louisa that I was afraid to stay any longer and that I was going home. I asked her to come, but she wouldn't. I left her and did not see anybody on the way back.

"I ran most of the way and when I got home I told my mother that I was afraid to stay and left Louisa there."

"After supper Mrs. Staula came over to the house and said that Louisa had not come home yet. I told her that I had left her in the bushes picking flowers and she went there and found her."

MOTHER WARNED CHILD OF DANGER

Following is the story of Mrs. Dominic Staula regarding the movements of her daughter, Louise, on the evening of the day she met her death, and the mother's finding of the dead body on the brink of Mother Brook.

"When Louise came home from school on Monday evening she said to me she wanted to go into the meadows to pick flowers. I told her to be sure and not go there unless she got Celia Di Vresc to accompany her. I did not want my daughter to go alone into the meadows, because the children had spoken of having been frightened from there before by a negro, and I was afraid that some harm might befall her.

"I did not pay any attention to Louise until long towards 6 o'clock, when I was surprised because she had not returned home. I walked over to Celia's house about that time and found Celia at home.

"'Where is Louise?' I asked Celia.

Going to Pick Flowers.

"'I left her on the road going to pick flowers,' answered Celia.

"'Didn't you go with her?' I asked.

"'No, I left her after we crossed the railroad track and came back and had a swing with Freddy Noifi.'

"I went over to the Noifi home and found Mrs. Noifi there. I thought that I might find Louise there, but she told me that she was not there. Mrs. Noifi and I then went down the private roadway towards Mother Brook, and I called a number of times, 'Louise, Louise.'

"I could get no reply. Then I began to look around among the neighbors to see if Louise was not at one of their homes. I went first to the home of Louis Staula, a relative of ours, but they did not know anything about it. Then I went to the homes of Joseph Campbennelli and Mrs. Morssa. I also stopped at the home of Michael Arabai. Not finding Louise I decided to go to the home of my married daughter in Dedham Centre, a mile and a half away.

Saw Child's White Skirt.

"My daughter Mary's husband is employed on the Stephen Weld estate. He and Mary were both at home and they accompanied me in a search for Louise. We went directly to the field where the children had gone to pick flowers and when we were about twenty-five feet or thirty feet away from where Louise was found I caught sight of my child's white skirt.

"I screamed, and my daughter, noticing the white clothing, also screamed. My daughter's husband, who accompanied us, had a lantern. We hurried to the spot, and I caught my child in my arms and carried her home.

In Swing with Playmate.

"I understand that Fred Noifi has said that he did not see Louise since last Saturday. He is wrong about that, because I saw her in the swing with Fred about 5 o'clock, when she went on the trip to gather flowers.

Celia di Vrese told me that she went with Louise across the track and then left her. On the way to the field she said she and Louise passed Fred, and he asked them where they were going. Celia said that she told him they were going to pick flowers. Celia then returned to Fred's house and swung with him for about five minutes.

"Celia said that Fred went into the house by the back door. She loitered about for a few minutes in the swing and then went home. Celia fixes the time that she left the swing to go to her home by saying that she saw two trains pass. This was shortly before 5 o'clock. It was after this that I saw Louise in the swing with Freddy.

"I do not suspect anyone—I cannot suspect anyone of this terrible crime. All we ask for is justice. The person who so brutally killed my little daughter should be punished by the law."

The life of Louise was insured for something like $200.

NO UNION PACIFIC ANNOUNCEMENT

NEW YORK, May 13.—E. H. Harriman, who arrived at his office shortly after 11 o'clock to-day, said that there would be no announcement on Union Pacific financing to-day. He added that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific boards would take up the matter of dividends, and that he would recommend the declaration of the usual dividends by both companies.

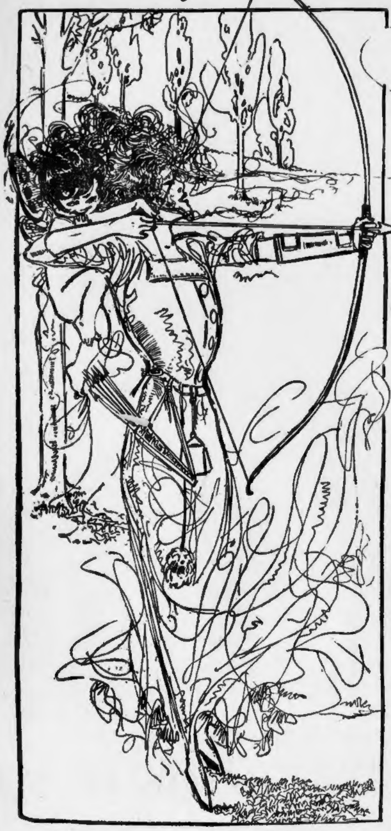
When Betty Is the Archer, It's Cupid That Draws the Bow---By Nell Brinkley



The Love-Elf gets behind the string and helps to notch the dart

"Oh, many a shaft at random sent Finds mark the archer little meant"

WHEN the American Betty flings away her tennis racquet and golf sticks and gets the archery fad—all the same [illegible] girl—it will be a circus to squat on a high fence and scan the face of this blessed country of ours under the curve of your hand.

All the little bug-like golfers, that look like nothing but grasshoppers, will not be; and the green of the hills and hollows and the level places will be gay with the white and the blue and the pink frocked damosels a-twanging away at a glaring target, with a quiver on one hip and a leather-cased arm.

And if you happen to be a Billy on the fence, there's future woe for you, the Love-Elf gets behind the string and helps to notch the dart.

And when you boldly and absent-mindedly sit out on a fence, or wander over the country, the bull's eye on the shirt pocket above your heart is like a signboard, and is most liable to get feathered.

Ho, ho! One can see it!

The open places will be like a field of battle, for the Bettinas will grow weary of zipping away at a bore of a target, and will turn Robin Hood and go after real game that has legs and can give them a stiff fight and is hurt when it's hit.

A very long time ago, I guess, my Lady of the quiver and bow and dart might really and truly have stalked the One Man, and sent an arrow, dipped in a stain that poisoned one with love madness, singing into his heart. But that was very, very Long Ago, and This Day her shaft is unstained and goes tamely home to the painted bore of a target.

But the bold, absent-minded Billiam on the fence gets a pain in his heart just the same; for he will flip his fingers at the high gods and pull their noses with high scorn, and he will watch the Betty of the Bow, and first thing he will slide off the fence and be tagging her around with his hands spread wide and bidding her look upon the bull's eye on his shirt pocket.

For the bending and loosing, and the swift run to the target and back again, and the lifting and holding of chin and arms, make the young body of a girl stretch and turn and twist into its longest, lithest lines.

And add on laughter and whipping hair, and all thinking of her ownself flung to the wind, with her eyes half shut in the sun and the glint of it on her hair, and the boy's way she has with you out in the open—it's a bullee "pie," and one grins to think of the "field of battle."

Funny, to think how every game that a Girl-Folk plays turns into a game of a man and a girl! Hearts pasted all over everything in sight!

A Billy may play his tennis till doomsday, if it's with other man-folks, and even if the Bettys line the chalk marks and every one of them is scandalously pretty, tennis is the game.

But, if one Betty with a fluff of hair and pettiskirts and bare arms and a foolish little laugh gets behind the net —I don't know; but it's any other thing in the world but tennis—the game is!

Don't Be Like the Foolish Parrot

It Is Unwise to Be Too Confiding About Personal Matters, Says Beatrice Fairfax

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ONCE upon a time there was a parrot that continually chattered and teased a monkey that was quartered in the same room with it.

Finally the monkey could stand it no longer and he attacked Miss Polly, tearing nearly every feather out of her tail.

When the owner, hearing the rumpus, came in to investigate, he found a very dejected parrot, which ruefully exclaimed: "The trouble with me is I talk too much."

That's a trouble that a good many of us are suffering from. We talk too much.

Women do more talking than men. That is, they do more talking on subjects that are apt to make trouble.

They talk about their husbands' business. They talk about their neighbors' business. And they fail lamentably to mind their own business.

Keep It to Yourselves

Girls talk about their love affairs too much. They are too ready to confide in any one who will listen.

I once heard a wise woman advising a girl. "My dear," she said, "never talk about the young men who are attentive to you. Let other girls do the talking, but you keep a still tongue."

That was good advice, and I hope the girl profited by it.

It may be a temptation to boast of the fun you have, but remember—"Least said, soonest mended."

The girl who most of all needs a still tongue is the one who is employed in a business office or in a private house.

It is a breach of trust to repeat that which is not your own affair. When you visit in a house it is most dishonorable to go away and talk about what has occurred while you were a guest in that house.

Also, you must remember that your employer's affairs should be absolutely sacred to you.

Don't Talk in Public.

At a down-town restaurant where I sometimes go for luncheon I see a great many young business women. Some of them talk quite freely about what goes on in the office where they are employed.

It is a great mistake, and I trust none of my girl friends are guilty of it.

When you are with a congenial person it is so easy to talk! And if that person has the power to lead you on you are quite apt to tell things that you will afterward regret.

Many of us say things in anger that we are quite horrified at later when calm reflection comes.

Try to resist the temptation to tell a good story if there is any question of its making trouble later on.

Mind your own business and confide in none but those whom you know to be absolutely trustworthy.

If you obey these rules you will save yourself much trouble and incidentally, perhaps, a good deal of remorse.

DELICIOUS BROWN BREAD

I TAKE my mixing bowl and into it I put one cup of bolted Indian meal, one cup rye flour, two cups common flour, one teaspoon of salt and a cup of molasses. Into the cup in which I measure the molasses I put one teaspoon of soda, and fill the cup half full of hot water, allowing it to foam; then fill it up with cold water and add to what I already have in my bowl, using as much more water as I need to make the right stiffness. Stir well, then put into a five-pound lard pail which has been well greased; cover and place inside a ten-pound pail. Fill large pail three-quarters full of boiling water and cover. Put in oven and never touch until ready for supper. Make it right after dinner.

The American Daily Short Story

Pierrot's Return

A DAY in early Autumn of idyllic brilliance; a day of sunshine, in bitter contrast to depressed, disappointed Paris, sick and sad to the heart. The streets clattering with the ring of soldiery, the people striving with strenuous efforts to overcome the atmosphere of gloom throughout the city. Wild gaiety! Reckless abandon! Hollow mirth! Behind it all the shadow of the approaching Prussians, and the appalling prospect of desolate misery.

Within a quaint courtyard, crudely paved with flagstones, sat Pierrot, on his knee a huge volume of "Chants d'Amour"; at his feet another ponderous tome. The quietude and old-world aspect of the spot were accentuated by the sound of armed men parading the streets, and the hysterical babble of the bewildered citizens from without. Suddenly Pierrot flung the volume to the stones, caught up a cap and flew madly through the narrow streets to an ivy-clad cottage close to the Quartier Latin. A missile was flung to the lattice window above, and a happy little face at once came into view.

"Pierrette, Pierrette, I must fight the Prussians!"

"With what weapons, pray? Your precious poetry?"

"Oh, dear, no! With sword and rifle. I'm in deadly earnest, sweetheart, really!"

"You stupid boy! Leave fighting to the men."

"Just as you will, Pierrette; I will not disgrace my father's house, I warrant you! I can fight with the best of them."

"And leave your Pierrette to pine away in loneliness."

"'Twere ever thus with you women! What would happen to the world if wives and sweethearts had their way?"

"It would make the world less naughty, methinks, Pierrot!"

"Nonsense! Come down, Pierrette, and please be serious!"

The Oath

Hand in hand they went to the paved courtyard. Seated on a large oaken bench they talked and chatted until evening came.

"Shall you be away long?"

"I shall be about three weeks," said Pierrot. "Can you be true so long?"

"Stupid boy! Who else is there?"

"Gustave—he admires you terribly."

"Phew! Gustave is a conceited popinjay," cried Pierrette. "Stay at home, then, Pierrot, please."

"I cannot; the drums call me! Sweetheart, swear to me——"

"Oh, Pierrot, I must not!"

"You must, dearie, swear to be faithful."

"Can't you trust me," Pierrot?"

"Yes! Let's go to the little church, Pierrette, and there say good-by."

Before their patron saint, in the sacred edifice, the two figures knelt hand in hand. The dim light penetrated the stained windows and a shaft gleamed full upon the two reverent faces. When they left the church Pierrette was crying.

"I can swear to be true, now, Pierrot."

"I shall fight the Prussians with a light heart, now dearie."

Late that night, with the harvest moon high in the heavens, Pierrot went forth to fight. A smart soldier lad, with his huge book of wars and a little Bible, Pierrette was almost too proud to weep.

"Good-by, dear heart, until——"

"Until the Prussians are vanquished. Good-by, sweetheart mine."

The bells of Notre Dame tolled solemnly, and Pierrot looked back for the fiftieth time. The little handkerchief waving from the lattice was just a speck.

Exactly a month later Pierrot returned to Paris, proud and miserable—proud because three Prussians at least had fallen by his hand; miserable because nothing beyond one solitary note had come from Pierette.

But there were so many possible explanations. Perhaps the letters had miscarried; maybe the name of his regiment and number had been lost. It was possible, too, that jealous Gustave had arranged matters to suit his own wicked ends. With many misgivings, poor Pierrot tapped at the door of the ivy-clad cottage. It was empty!

Intuitively his feet wandered toward the church—their church—as they had always termed it. A restful feeling came over him as he remembered the parting there. He approached the niche where they had knelt togther. A little moaning voice startled him. There, before the saint, was a lonely figure, with Pierrette's sad face illumined by the streaming sunlight. Pierrot clung to a pillar and listened.

For Her Love

"Dear Mother, teach me what to do! Pierrot is coming back from the war, and I love Gustave. I swore to be true, and I will—but it wouldn't be fair—I know it wouldn't. I'm so miserable, for Pierrot has been braver than anyone. Gustave has been kind and good to me. I love him. But I swore to be true to Pierrot."

An hour later they met in the stone courtyard.

"Oh, Pierrot, I am so glad to see you back!"

"Are you, Pierrette? I'm sorry!"

"Sorry? Why?"

"Human nature is so foolish, dear!"

"What can you mean, stupid?"

"I was wounded and lay in hospital for a whole week—I don't know how to tell you, Pierrette."

"What?"

"An awfully pretty girl nursed me."

"Oh, Pierrot, fie!"

"You will hate me, Pierrette, but—I forgot you."

"Pierrot, you are a flirt!"

"No—I love her!"

"Well, I don't care; I love Gustave, but I was never going to tell you."

"What a dear old world it is, Pierrette; everything works out for the best."

"You mustn't kiss me, Pierrot."

"Why not?"

"You love the pretty nurse!"

"My word! I had almost forgotten!"

Once again that night Pierrot knelt before the saint—alone—and in tears, and prayed for forgiveness.

"A lie for her love," he plead.

In the Key of A-Flat

Suspicious Mrs. McBrier Has a New Neighbor

"I HAPPENED to walk upstairs tonight with our new neighbor across the hall," McBrier said to his wife. "Name's Beckwith. I hope you won't put off calling on them, dear. They're superior people, if I'm any judge."

"You spoke with him, then?"

"Him? It was Mrs. Beckwith."

"Oh!"

"A mighty nice little woman, I should say."

"She carefully avoided meeting my eye when we were both on the back porch yesterday," returned his wife a little stiffly. "I thought she must be of the extremely conventional type. It's odd how much more sociable she felt with you!"

"Oh, I started it. You'd find her responsive, all right, if you made friendly advances. I certainly did."

For some occult reason this conversation failed to send Mrs. McBrier rushing over to the new neighbor's flat next day. In fact, a week passed, with McBrier inquiring regularly about the matter every evening, and still she had not called on Mrs. Beckwith.

All the other women in the building had been there by that time and Mrs. Beckwith's praises were being sung in five flats; yet some little spirit, best known to womankind, kept Mrs. McBrier inventing excuses for delay.

Just Listen to This!

AT last the thing happened which apparently justified her course.

"Listen to this, if you please," she said to her husband rather primly at dinner time, "and tell me what you think. For my part, it either proves that Mr. Beckwith is as nearly mannerless as men are made or—I don't know what.

"To-day the groceryman left three parcels for the Beckwiths at our back door, because he couldn't get an answer to their bell and asked me to see that they got them. Of course I couldn't refuse.

"Well, hardly."

"Though I might, very well, considering how careful Mrs. Beckwith seems to be to avoid meeting me face to face in the hall or on the porch. But I took the parcels in and hindered myself all day, keeping watch so that she should have her things as soon as she came back.

"At about 4 o'clock I heard somebody in her kitchen and stepped over there. Now, whoever was in that kitchen couldn't have helped seeing me through the window, but the first thing I heard was the chain put on the door!"

McBrier smiled indulgently. "She told me the day I talked with her that she was timid about burglars."

"She managed to tell you a good deal at that one meeting."

"It was in connection with hoping that you and she'd be neighborly."

"Well, that's neither here nor there. After the chain was on, the door opened a crack, but not one word was said and nobody appeared. Finally I spoke—as pleasantly as I could to thin air—and said that those packages of hers had been left in my care.

"Then, to my astonishment, a man's arm shot out through the crack, snatched the bundles without so much as a word, and slammed the door in my face."

"A man's arm? Are you sure?"

"Yes, in a black coat sleeve. Of course I'm sure!"

McBrier looked surprised. "Well!" he said. "I don't know. Beckwith came in with me at 6 o'clock."

"He did?"

"Yes, but he might have come home early and gone out again."

"Of course, but even if he did he acted like a boor."

"That's a fact," McBrier admitted with a crestfallen air, and seemed averse to discussing the subject further.

It was on the tip of Mrs. McBrier's tongue to say how glad she was that, being less impulsive than her husband, she had not hurried into an acquaintance which they might both regret. However, as it was, the advantage was so manifestly on her side that she forbore.

A Burglar! Shivers!

SHE was sincerely glad that she had said nothing more when Mrs. Hawley from the second floor dropped in for a moment next morning.

"I suppose you've heard of the excitement?" Mrs. Hawley began.

"No."

"Haven't! That's strange! The Beckwith flat was entered while Mrs. Beckwith was away yesterday afternoon and nearly all their silverware was taken. Her watch, too. And they haven't a trace of the burglar."

"Oh!" Mrs. McBrier exclaimed in honest sympathy. "And that explains—wait just a minute till I see if my back door is locked and I'll tell you the queerest thing you ever heard of.

"It certainly makes the shivers go down my back," she resumed, when she returned. Then she told the story of the silent man whose arm had reached out for the parcels.

"Of all things!" cried Mrs. Hawley at the end. "Of course, that was the burglar, and perhaps it will help catch him. Mrs. Beckwith's gone for the forenoon or I'd run straight over and tell her. She's as sweet a little woman as ever lived. By the way, have you called there yet?"

"No," was the answer. "I—I've been so busy, you know, but I—I'm going to call this afternoon."

Expert Hints on Beauty

By the Professor

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Please suggest some simple remedy for blackheads and pimples. J. A.

THE simplest way to treat them is to open the pores by the application of a folded towel, wet with water, and held to the face until cooled slightly. Then press out the blackhead or the pus by means of a comedo extractor, bathe the irritated spots with peroxide and then anoint with cream. Now, all this will temporarily remove the pimples and the blackheads, but unless you remove the cause, which will probably be found in the digestive tract, it will do no permanent good. So that is the most important thing to be done in curing pimples and blackheads.

INGROWING NAILS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am greatly troubled with ingrowing nails on both my big toes, causing me a great deal of pain. Is there anything I can put on that will stop the growth of the nails? Please inform me what to do. W. H. J.

IT is wise to have the nails treated the first time by a chiropodist, as it will be necessary to remove from under the nail the hardened cuticle which causes all the trouble. After this you can watch the growth and keep it from growing to any magnitude, but always be careful when cutting it out not to make the flesh bleed. After gradually removing this hard substance fill up the space with good, soft cream and pack it with cotton. Keep a packing all the time under the nail, and keep it trimmed square. If you follow closely this treatment you will have no further trouble. The term "ingrowing" is a misnomer, really, for the nail does not grow down at all, but presses on this bit of hardened cuticle, which does not belong there, and pushes it down into the flesh.

WOMEN CLAIM FRAUD IN SALE OF BOOK SET

Case of Purchasers Now in Hands of Judge Bacon of Newton Court.

SAY NO BOOKS SHOWN

Five hundred women, who signed applications for membership in a philanthropic "Mothers' League," and were notified next day that they had agreed to purchase twenty-one volumes of the "Young Folks' Library" (so-called), are to-day eagerly awaiting the decision of Judge Bacon of the Newton Court in three suits brought by the Hall & Locke Company to recover from as many defendants the sum charged for the books—$45.

It is a very trite saying that "Dead men tell no tales," but, according to the ingenious letter heads of this book concern, with offices at No. 17 Tremont place, the late and lamented Thomas Bailey Aldrich was editor-in-chief of the "Young Folks' Library." Other dead men, including Dr. William Rainey Harper of Chicago University and United States Senator George Frisbie Hoar, are among the associate editors.

Three defendants appeared in the Newton court yesterday—all of them comely young mothers—and all alike accused the agent of the Hall & Locke Company of obtaining their signatures to a contract by misrepresentation. Their attorneys declared that the methods employed were clearly fraudulent, and asked verdicts for their clients on this ground.

These defendants were: Mrs. George N. Graham, Mrs. Lola M. Arnold and Mrs. Isabella Barron, all of Newton.

Claimed to Be School Teacher.

Mrs. Graham swore on the stand that Miss Colby, the canvasser, represented herself as a school teacher who was getting up a "Mothers' League," and that not a word was said about any set of books. She testified that when she signed her name she supposed it was an application for membership in this mothers' association. She was shown a list of some eighty Newton women who had "joined." She saw no prospectus, sample book, nor even a binding. The other women defendants told essentially the same stories to the Court.

J. Arnold Farrer appeared as counsel for the plaintiff; Junius T. Auerbach for Mrs. Graham, Robert W. Frost for Mrs. Arnold and Charles H. Fisk, Jr., for Mrs. Barron. Justice Bacon took the cases under advisement.

Attorney Farrer put on the stand Charles E. Tibbets, for six years manager of the Hall & Locke Company, in an attempt to show that the books had been offered for delivery to the defendants by a driver of the American Express Company. Mr. Tibbets was the only witness for the plaintiff and the other side didn't see how he could prove what the American Express Company did, without any of its agents in court. The defendants, incidentally, couldn't say whether the box contained books or sardines.

The method by which the signature to the contract was obtained was a matter concerning which attorneys for the defendants questioned their clients very closely. In response to the queries of Counsel Auerbach, Mrs. Graham testified that she had signed her name on a blank sheet of paper as a member of this "Mothers' League," the blank later turning out to be the back of a contract for the books.

All three swore that the woman canvasser showed them no books, nor any bindings, but that she did exhibit a number of pamphlets, the like of which would be mailed to the mothers to guide them in the rearing and education of their children after they had joined the "league."

Signed Name January 15.

Mrs. Graham put her name on the contract alleged to be fraudulent on January 15, 1908. Manager Tibbets was unable to explain to Attorney Auerbach's satisfaction why he hadn't notified her until March 4, nearly three months after, that she had broken her "contract." He swore that he had sent her a letter, which turned out to be a circular form. He did not register the letter, and was unable to prove definitely that she had received this notice.

Mrs. Barron even declared on oath that though the signature on the back of the contract looked like her writing, she had no recollection of writing it. Attorney Fisk in his summing up called the attention of the court to certain differences in the signatures on the front and back of the contract, but added that it would take the evidence of handwriting experts to determine whether or not she wrote both.

15 FAMILIES IN PERIL AS THIEF CUTS GAS PIPE

Police say that Michael McCabe endangered the lives of fifteen families living in the apartment house at No. 190 Albany street last night when he cut out all the lead pipe in the cellar connected with the gas supply, even taking down the meter. The tenants had to be turned out into the street to air the house, while gas company employes were called to cut off the supply from the gas main. If the tenants had gone to sleep before the danger was discovered the police say that there might have been a frightful loss of life through asphyxiation.

McCabe's arrest was the result of the vigilance of Patrolman P. F. Flaherty of the East Dedham street station. He was standing at Albany and Way streets when he saw McCabe go by. The man's clothing was covered with whitewash. The policeman saw a piece of led pipe sticking out of the bundle under McCabe's arm. He followed McCabe to a junk shop and arrested him there on the charge of larceny. The prisoner says he lives at No. 825 Washington street, and that he is twenty-five years old. When Patrolman Flaherty heard where the pipe came from he rushed to the Albany street apartment house and found escaping gas was fast filling it.

'RICH DECEIVER OF POOR, GIRL MUST PAY PENALTY'

ATTORNEY FOR MISS HOBART DETERMINED TO BRING FULLERTON TO JUSTICE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

YONKERS, N. Y., May 13.—"We will see whether a rich man's son may cast off a poor girl at his pleasure, without paying the penalty provided by law, or whether justice will prevail over the man who has a million behind him. I propose to fight this case through if it takes me until the end of my life," said City Judge Joseph H. Beall of Yonkers to-day, in speaking of the arrest of Robert W. Fullerton of St. Louis, against whom charges of abduction have been made by Miss Gladys Hobart of No. 30 Hawley terrace, Yonkers.

City Judge Beall is Miss Hobart's counsel. When the case was first brought to his attention in his court by a number of prominent society people of Yonkers, who had interested themselves in Miss Hobart, Judge Beall made an investigation of the facts that were given to him. He says he found sufficient corroborative evidence to lay before the Grand Jury of New York County and have Fullerton indicted.

"Rather See Son Dead."

"I want to place this matter properly before the public," said Judge Beall. "Fullerton's father, I see, telegraphed to New York a story to the effect that Miss Hobart had been continually pressing his son for money. That is a deliberate and gross falsehood, made solely for the purpose of ruining Miss Hobart's name and character. When old man Fullerton came to New York to see me after I wrote him about his son and we met in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, he never said a word about Miss Hobart's asking for money. In fact, she was only ten days with young Fullerton when she ran away from him in South America.

"At that conference in the Waldorf I told old man Fullerton that I wanted his son to marry Miss Hobart and that if he didn't I would solemnly vow that I would send him behind the State prison bars. Old Fullerton said to me: 'I'd rather see my son dead than marry that poor girl. My son told me he did not love the girl, and I don't think that matches without love are good ones.'

"Think of it," exclaimed Judge Beall, "that man talking to me about questions of morality and love, when his own son had taken a girl's honor and name from her under the promise of marriage.

A Strikingly Pretty Girl.

"I shall now test the theory that because he has millions and she has nothing that ends the case."

Miss Gladys Hobart is now twenty-five years old. She is a strikingly pretty girl and blonde. From 1900 to 1904 she was a student in Cornell College, Ithaca, and there met Robert W. Fullerton, son of S. H. Fullerton, president of the Chicago Lumber & Coal Company of St. Louis. The two young people were thrown together a great deal in golf and tennis games. Fullerton spoke to the girl of her beauty and of his great love for her, and whenever they went out together he lavishly spent money to create an impression upon Miss Hobart. He was gentle and affable, spoke with an air of refinement and finally asked that they keep company.

In 1904 Miss Hobart graduated. She left college, bade him a farewell and came to New York city to take up school teaching.

In the early part of September, 1906, Fullerton suddenly came to New York. He called on her unawares and told her he had to make a hurried trip to South America and that perhaps the trip might take him around the globe.

Lured Her on Board Ship.

"Won't you see me off at the pier, Gladdie?" he asked. The girl put on her hat and coat and accompanied him to the pier, where he was about to board the ship Trent for South America.

"If you could only go with me now," he said.

"Rob, I'll wait until you return," she replied.

"But that may be a long two years or more, Gladdie, and in the meantime your little heart will forget me," he said.

He invited her aboard the ship. Tears came to her eyes as he spoke and she consented to go aboard the Trent. While she was on board Fullerton busied her with conversation until suddenly Miss Hobart felt the ship moving. Fullerton consoled her and suggested that she might as well go along and that they could be married on the South American shores. He did not keep his promise.

HUNDREDS AT FUNERAL OF MACDONNELL

Beautiful in its simplicity, and attended by hundreds of former business associates and close personal friends of this city and New York, the funeral service of S. A. MacDonnell, the Boston merchant, was held yesterday at Tremont Temple, Rev. P. S. Henson, pastor, officiating. The platform was buried beneath a bank of flowers, and conspicuous among the tokens was a mound of 4,000 violets, the gift of the employes of the MacDonnell store.

The Tremont Temple and Appollo quartets sang "Nearer My God to Thee," "To Die No More," "Gathering Home" and "Out of the Shadow." Dr. Henson, in the eulogy, spoke of the tender bond of affection between Mr. and Mrs. MacDonnell and of his sterling character, his generosity and the nobility of his business life.

"He had ideals," said Dr. Henson, "and he endeavored to realize them to the best of his ability. He was an example to Boston business men and I thank God for such a life."

Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery. The bearers were John Lentz, T. H. Anderson, George Willis, Thomas Strange, Frank Plimpton, John Rogers, George Wright and Mr. Edwards.

'NICK' DENIES ALICE 'TACKED' THE DIPLOMAT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, formerly Alice Roosevelt, the irrepressible daughter of the President, did not put a tack in the seat of a dignified ambassador in the diplomatic gallery of the House of Representatives, according to her husband, Congressman Longworth of Ohio.

The Evening Journal sent a telegram to Congressman Longworth at Washington, asking him if the story that Mrs. Longworth had caused the painful discomfiture of the diplomat to her own intense amusement was true. The following telegram was received in reply:

Evening Journal:
Story absolutely absurd and incorrect.
NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

According to the story sent out by the Washington correspondents, Mrs. Longworth went to the Capitol to accompany her husband home. She went into the gallery reserved for the President to wait for him. It was a dull afternoon in the House, and while her gaze roved idly around Mrs. Longworth spied a tack upon the floor. It was a capable, shiny, well-made tack, and Mrs. Longworth picked it up. Separated from her only by a railing was the diplomatic gallery. Reaching through the railing, she is said to have carefully placed the tack on one of the diplomatic seats in such a position as to render it most effective. A few minutes elapsed, and a diplomat entered the gallery. He walked over and carefully sat down on the tack. He leaped up again, speaking rapidly in his mother tongue, and Mrs. Longworth was so overcome at the humor of the situation that she had to go out into the corridor.

MERRY WIDOW LED TO THIEF'S ARREST

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 13.—A "Merry Widow" hat that was so large that it caused the lid of a trunk to bulge out, furnished the clue that resulted in the arrest of William H. August, alleged to be a professional boarding house thief, at the Lehigh Valley station in this city.

'TROVATORE' IS HEARD AT MAJESTIC

"Il Trovatore" was sung by the Knickerbocker Grand Opera Company at the Majestic Theatre last evening, and the rendition was pleasing to an audience which appeared quite critical. This opera, one of the most popular ever composed, has been given many times in Boston by companies of greater fame, and while often better sung, it has seldom been heard by the voices of a more painstaking and earnest cast. The audience was not so large as at the opening night, but it rewarded the singers with many plaudits.

Mme. Laura Bethy sang the role of Leonora, and her appearance with this company is her introduction to Boston. Her lower tones are the fullest and most pleasing in her register. Her voice has considerable power. She does not lack in either dramatic understanding or fire. Miss Colombati, the Azucena, has a pleasing, well-trained voice. Her art is sufficient to display its best qualities. The men in the cast were acceptable. Mr. Zubino as Manrico was meritorious. The tower song had its usual reward in the form of applause.

To-night the company will sing Verdi's "Traviata," with Mme. Padovani and Messrs. Barili and Alessandroni in leading roles.

WAS DELIRIOUS WITH ECZEMA

On Chest, Back, and Head—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Nerves in Exhausted Condition—Sleep Badly Broken.

CURE BY CUTICURA SEEMED LIKE MAGIC

"Words cannot express the gratitude I feel for what Cuticura Remedies have done for my daughter, Adelaide. She is fifteen years of age, and had never had anything the matter with her skin until four months ago, when an eruption broke out on her chest. The first symptom was a redness, and then followed thickening and blisters, which would break and run matter. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but instead of being checked, the disease spread. It showed itself on her back, and then quickly spread upwards until the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and what with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. She became run down in health, and at times was very feverish, languid, and drowsy, and occasionally she was delirious. Her nerves were in such a low state that she could not bear to be left alone. In spite of the cold weather she would insist on having her bedroom window open, and would lean out on the window-sill. She did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first, and I really do not know what we should have done if we had not read how Cuticura cured a similar case. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Her hair is coming on nicely, and I still apply the Cuticura Ointment as I find it increases the growth wonderfully. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, 1, Ongar Place, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

WHALEY GIRL COMES INTO LEGACY TO-DAY

NEW YORK, May 13.—The accounting of Mrs. Kaaiah Whaley, executrix of the estate of the mother of Floretta Whaley, who eloped with the Rev. Jere Knode Cooke, was made at Hemstead to-day, and hundreds of people surrounded the court house in the hope that the seventeen-year-old heiress would appear.

For two weeks it had been rumored there that she was to return to witness the filing of the document, and her grandmother expressed the hope that she would do so.

Under the terms of the will the young woman comes into $5,000 now, and will inherit one-half of $125,000 upon the death of her grandmother. The old woman said she still believed Floretta would return to her some day, and that she would always find an open door.

JAIL FOR FRAUD REGISTRATION IN LONG FIGHT

NEW YORK, May 13.—The sentence of two years' imprisonment imposed upon former Assemblyman Joseph J. Cahill of Brooklyn, for registration fraud, was affirmed to-day by the Apellate Division. Cahill now must go to jail, after a legal battle which has lasted three years.

He was arrested on December 11, 1905, after Bernard McKenna and John White were arrested by the superintendent of elections for false registration in the Tenth Election District of the Third Assembly District.

FUGITIVES SURROUNDED IN SWAMP

DANBURY, Conn., May 13.—When the man hunt for the Lockwood brothers, thought to be responsible for the many outrages around North Salem, N. Y., began again to-day, the leaders of the posse announced that the men probably were hiding in the swamp, where they once were surrounded.

To back up their theory they stated positively that the brothers had been traced to the swamp several different times when they had come out for food. It is charged the relatives of the Lockwood brothers have given them provisions and shelter when the hunters have been too hot on the trail.

PRINCE HELIE PLANS TO CLUB THAT DEAR BONI

MONTE CARLO, May 13.—Prince Helie de Sagan has taken to carrying a heavy bludgeon in anticipation, he is said to have told friends, of an unexpected attack by his cousin, Count Boni de Castellane. The Prince has been warned that the Count means to attack him again "on sight."

Helie figures that he will play the heroic part in the next fracas and Boni that of the victim of a sound caning. He is so earnest in his desire really to damage his enemy that the idea of a meeting on the "field of honor" appears never to have occurred to him.

WILLIE FITZGERALD DEFEATS MEXICAN

BY DYKE CLARK.

The Irish Harp, Willie Fitzgerald, played a merry tune on Aurelia Herrera, the Mexican, in their twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A. and there was nearly some dirge music for the copper colored Mexicano in the middle of the little mittfest.

The Mexican might have been licked to a shoe string if Fitz hadn't been afraid to close with his swarthy foe, but all the urging and coaxing by his seconds wouldn't make him take too many chances or give Herrera an opportunity to dig in that terrible right which he carried slung at his side.

It was a case of one not daring and the other dasn't, as Fitz was continually pulling away as the Mexican made an imitation of how he could use his right if Fitz would only remain in position to take it, while Herrera waddled around waiting to unsling his hay maker.

While Herrera lost the decision the laugh was on Fitz most of the time at his signs of timidity. Herrera would just have to give the sign that he was ready to unloosen his right wallop and Fitz would back up in a hurry.

Mexican Lacked Action.

The bout resembled a mixup between a slothful bear, who was impersonated by Herrera, and a live tiger cat in Fitz. He would step in quick, stinging the Mexican with straight lefts and hooks or welt to the body with his right, that is when he was sure that Herrera right could be avoided.

The Mexican acted as if he needed a good sized horsewhip to wake him up as he continually walked around the ring backing on the ropes where Fitz had a picnic, battering him as he tried to cover up. Occasionally Herrera acted as if one of the punches hit a spring and he would let fly in true Spanish fury, while Fitz sought shelter and had narrow escapes from getting copped by one of the sleep producers which were being cast loose. Fitz plodded along, willing to score as often as he could without getting mussed up with that right of the Mexican's, and it was in the eighth round that he slipped over his right that caught the Mexican fairly on the chops and he sank to the floor, taking the full count. He had hardly got to his feet when he got the same medicine as his belfry refused to work. He climbed to his pedals again practically helpless, but just enough left to slip out of the way of Fitz's mad efforts to put him away for keeps. He lasted to the bell, but started to go to Fitz's corner. He was so dazed and had to be steered right.

The Mexican simply stalled through the ninth, swinging just once, and had Willie stayed in the way it would have been all up with him.

Fitz Gets a Surprise.

They had hardly been at it in the tenth when the Mexican was acting groggy, as Fitz followed him around the ring hooking with lefts to the head and following up with his right when suddenly the dark lined lad set sail and the way he proceeded to eat up Fitz was a caution. He tore in like a bull, smashing away with either hand, and just as the bell rang he had a right under way which was about to connect with Fitz's jaw as the Harp was pulling away to get out of the storm.

It was the last spasm of the Mexican's, as he simply got back in his shell again and let Fitz do all the heavy work while he endeavored to avoid Fitz's frantic efforts to finish him.

Harry Tuthill, the Detroit baseball trainer, was behind Fitz and did his best to have Fitz go to the Mexican's stomach, but Fitz was not leaving any openings for his jaw that he could avoid.

It was a bout that the ringsiders could readily appreciate in spite of the slothful methods pursued by the Mexican, who had the speed, but it was enough to show that he was a dangerous customer.

Fred Sidney and Joe Nelson met in the semi-final of eight rounds, going to a draw. Young Delaney, a protege of Larry Temple's from Northboro, earned the decision over Kid McDonald of Chelsea in a hot scrap of eight sessions.

MOONEY SAYS KETCHEL SHOULD DEFEAT PAPKE

By Johnny Mooney.

Stanley Ketchel wants to fight Tommy Burns. That's a good one. I don't underrate the ability of the Grand Rapids slugger, as he showed clearly that he is a wonder by the way he cleaned up the Sullivan family, but it's a different matter when he tackles Tommy Burns.

While it is true that Burns has been picking up easy things across the water, he is coming back here shortly and will prove that he has a right to claim the heavyweight championship.

I have been with Ketchel and Burns when they were first starting out and know their careers like a book, but as regards a meeting between them at the present stage of the game, it is a case like the old adage that a good big man is better than a big little man generally.

While Ketchel has all the earmarks of becoming a prominent heavyweight, since he has stated that he will no longer fight at the middle weight after meeting Papke, I think that he would make a mistake tackling Burns for some years yet.

"I have seen Ketchel come along since his early days in Butte when I had Melody there, and saw that he was a natural fighter, and while he has proved that he is a wonderful middleweight, he is likely to make a mistake by going after Burns just at present.

Burns on the other hand may figure it out that the best time to catch the tough Ketchel would be at the present before he acquires more weight, and for that reason a match may be arranged when Burns gets back to this country if the proper inducements are offered, as Burns was never known to sidestep the sound of coin.

Ketchel should win from Papke when they meet in Milwaukee, if one should judge by the easy way Walter Stanton reached the Illinois whirlwind in their match in the Hub.

Papke has always won his battles on his merits, and Ketchel does not appear to worry any at meeting him in a town where he is rated as an idol.

LOWELL TO GET NEW PLAYERS

LOWELL, May 13.—Baseball fans in Lowell are beginning to worry about their team, which is a member of the New England League. To date the team has not won a game, and there is no reason to believe that a change of pace will take place unless several changes are made. The team is weak principally in hitters. President Al. Winn states that he has signed Carl Vandegrift, formerly of the University of Illinois, to play one of the infield positions. Catcher Duggan has been suspended for alleged indifferent playing.

LIGHT WORK FOR HARVARD.

The Harvard football squad had a light drill yesterday by Coach Haughton, owing to the heat, in which the men found vigorous work oppressive.

FAST MILES AT COMBINATION

Out at Combination Park the trainers have begun stepping their horses along with the return of good weather. The fastest mile has been made by the pacer King's Heir, owned by C. Toothaker, in 2:20, and next to him comes Aintree, 2:10¾, that Frank Fox has worked in 2:22. A whole lot of miles have been reeled off by others at the park in better than 2:30.

Fred Rideout is the latest arrival with Daisy Bell, 2:21¼; Rosamond, 2:21¼; Delia A., 2:22¾; and the green trotting mare Somosa, by Bingen.

He is preparing his string for a campaign over the Northern Vermont and New Hampshire Circuit, and will enter Somosa in all the slow trotting stakes. She should bring home her share of the money, as when in condition she has demonstrated that she can go 2:10 over any decent mile track, which means beating 2:20 a whole lot over the circuit in which she is headed.

Papke Will Have to Work to Defend Title
KETCHEL NOW CANDY KID

BY TAD.

Ketchel for President.

Looks as though that carrot-topped kid from Montana was going to be an idol, eh? He took big brother Jawn (Twin) Sullivan and beat fifty-seven kinds of fireworks out of him Saturday afternoon at Colma. Brother Jawn went in to get even for the beating Ketchel gave Bro'her Mike, but fared worse than the latter, as he stayed longer and got more.

Looks like the Sullivans will have to get the old man after Ketchel now. He's going right through the whole family. Poor Jawn wasn't in it at all. The Montana lad was too rough, too aggressive and too young.

He's the sort that will make the middleweights sit up and converse coherently.

Guess that Papke person out in Illinois isn't sitting up late these nights studying "the amateur boxers' catechism." They will call upon Willus shortly to defend that title he copped from Hugo Kelly in Milwaukee, and the red-headed boy from Montana will be the one who will do the disputing.

If the affair comes off at Colma, where forty-five rounds are allowed, there will be some betting and more than five or six people at the ringside the day of the battle.

Both Papke and Ketchel are young fellows who take care of themselves, and if they do meet the promoter can honestly call it "The Battle of the Universe" without fear of cracking his lip.

Poor old Battling Nelson is going to meet Packey McFarland this month at Milwaukee in a ten-round go. Packey says the Dane is a cinch. Attell said he was, too. So did a lot of others. Funny the "poor old" fellow is always there at the finish, isn't it? Funny they didn't want to go forty-five rounds with him instead of ten? He might be a cinch, but Packey would just as soon swallow a circular saw as to sign up for more than ten rounds.

* * *

Tommy Burns is sending out circulars now. This morning one was received from the great man and duly read. A sporting writer, who is probably working as a press agent of the "champion sidestepper," has written a wad of soft stuff in his paper about Tommy and his great deeds, and the latter has had a million circulars printed with this stuff in them. He writes to say that he has real money up over there to call Johnson and signs it "Yours truly, the Lemon Picking Kid, Tommy Burns."

Nice work, Tommy, old boy, but it's awfully bunk stuff.

Why is it that you demand $30,000, win, lose or draw, to fight either Jim Jeffries, Jack Johnson or Sam McVey? What?

Discretion is the better part of valor. Let's see, who wrote that?

* * *

Packy McFarland is getting that way now, too. He won't fight Gans unless he gets $30,000 Next!

* * *

King Edward calls Tommy Burns a "Yankee bluffer." Old Ed might not know a race horse from a bunch of asparagus, but he knows that old bunk game of Burns's when he sees it.

* * *

When Jimmy Kelly was a comer and was getting the coin, Florrie Barnett took him in tow. "You have the money, Jimmy, and I have the experience," said the slick little manager to the new fighter. "We will string along together and go to the top." They did for a year. At the end of that time Florrie had the kush and James the knowledge. Hence the lime.

* * *

The London papers are tumbling to the bluff thrown out by T. Burns in regard to a match with Jack Johnson, and are treating Tommy in rather a rough manner. Johnson has made quite a hit with the British sports since his arrival, and the tall black has a bunch of bull in the papers daily airing his views. He writes a letter from the Adelphi Hotel in London, and "this is what it said":

London, Eng., April 28, 1908.

Dear Tad—I arived safely in London, as you probably know by this time, but had an awful tough time of it, as I was never built for a sailor.

Burns is till trying to sidestep me with that $30,000 bluff, but this old chap will catch him, never fear.

I expect to be showing at the 'alls 'ere soon, and will journey over to Paris for a few weeks after that and show there, too.

Am going 'orse back riding in 'yde Park to-morrow, so you can see that I'm quite Hinglish already, docherknow. It's all right, this English stuff, but German—nein.

Oh, that Kronprinz Wilhelm bunch on the boat coming over! They were the limit.

Fitzpatrick asked the waiter for cold roast beef one night and the German didn't understand him and brought all the meats on the menu. Horse meat, pig meat, goat meat, smoked meat, dried meat, fresh meat and meat you couldn't eat at all. It was the funniest thing you ever saw, but what's the use of being Dutch if you can't be dumb.

Well, my lad, I must close and go to tea. 'Ave you 'ad your tea yet, old chap?

Remember me to my Boston friends.

Yourse for 'arf and 'arf,
JACK JOHNSON.

Sam joins me in sending best wishes.

The London Sportsman has the following to say regarding Burns and Johnson:

> The general opinion is that Burns should give Johnson a match. Yesterday afternoon that matter was discussed and threshed out thoroughly by a gathering of well-known and influential sporting men, and the conclusion arrived at was that the challenge issued to the colored pugilist was quite in order and ought to be accepted. One gentleman remarked that Burns had no possible get out.
>
> In course of conversation it was pointed out that men like Jackson and Slavin, Sullivan and Mitchell, Slavin and Smith and Smith and Kilrain, who had each and all battled for the championship, had never suggested such terms as those put forward by Burns. The stand taken by the French-Canadian is certainly without precedent on this side, and it does not strike one as being altogether in a sporting spirit.
>
> Johnson had been accused by Burns as possessing the "yellow streak," which interpreted means that the black man is a coward. This has yet to be proved. He has come to England and challenged a man who claims the championship, and, while not in a position to put down thousands, he is willing to fight for a sum that would have been looked upon as fabulous by men of quite as good class as either Burns or Johnson. No man should be allowed to shelter himself behind his pocket. We are not saying that Burns is doing this, for it would infer that he is afraid of meeting Johnson, and if such a feeling exists it has yet to be proved. Burns has frequently stated that he is in the business for money, and no one can blame him for getting together what he can before his powers fail him. But a championship should be open to all; anyway, to those who can put down a reasonable amount.

Three sports and a clothing store dummy entered Tom Sharkey's emporium the other night and ordered drinks. The three stood the dummy up against the bar and licked up the wet stuff until the bartender (Mr. Sharkey) got a cramp in the dealing arm. They all blew the place, leaving the wooden rum still leaning.

Not having received the necessary ducats for the booze, Mr. Sharkey came from behind the bar and, shaking the dummy, said: "Who's stuck for the drinks?"

No answer.

"Who's buying here, anyway?" piped Mr. Sharkey for the second time, shaking the dummy. "I got to close up now."

Still no answer.

Mr. Sharkey, losing his temper, then pulled back his right and swung with terrific force upon the head of the poor figure. It fell to the floor and the other three rushed in. They picked it up, and, looking at Sharkey with their eyes sticking out of their heads, yelled:

"Why, you've killed him; he's dead; you killed the man."

Sharkey turned his back, and, walking away, said: "I don't care. I did it in self-defence; he hit me first."

Abe Attell is in bad out in Frisco. Since his go with Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan they have found out things, and Abraham has, like the Arab, "folded his tent and silently stole away."

They say Sully was to get $1,250 for losing.

The money was put in the hands of an outsider, who was to dig if Tommy went out before the fifth round. He blew up in the fourth. Frisco sports are now a bit ruffled at Abraham, and will have no more of him. He is coming East. Abe was a 10 to 3 favorite, but those who fixed the fake couldn't get enough money down, and bets were called off at the last moment.

DORCHESTER RACES JUNE 17

E. H. Morse, secretary of the speed committee of the Dorchester Driving Club, has made announcement of the racing card for the club's field day at Columbia Park, June 17, which promises to be a local feature attraction for Bunker Hill Day, as follows:

Special slow trot, special slow pace, 2:28 trot or pace, 2:18 trot, 2:18 pace and the 2:11 pace or 2:08 trot. The prizes offered are in each event solid silver cups, the first trophy being valued at $25, second $20 and the third of $15. A special ribbon will be awarded the fourth horse in the summaries.

All of the races will be of half-mile heats and to end the third heat. In case of a tie for any of the positions the horses are to race the tie off. In the special slow trot and pace a committee will bar trotters capable of beating 1:17, or 1:15 for pacers. Entries close June 6. June 6.

STREET COMMISSIONERS TO DISCUSS NEW RULES

By J. C. Kerrison.

The Board of Street Commissioners for the City of Boston will at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning open a hearing on the question of rules and regulations governing the use of streets by vehicles of every description. At this hearing special consideration will be given to the question of providing in the rules to be adopted that in certain streets, such as School, Bromfield and Winter streets, vehicles shall pass through these streets in one direction only, and that there shall be no loading or unloading of bulky and heavy packages of merchandise, the delivery of coal, ice, etc., and the removal of waste during certain fixed hours of the day.

It is to be hoped that the Street Commissioners will adopt rules and regulations that will prevent the present confusion in the public streets, and not only adopt the same, but take such measures as may be necessary to secure their enforcement. All who use the public thoroughfares, horse owners and motorists alike, will unite in any effort to secure a more comprehensive set of rules, rules such as will prevent one from driving all over the streets, no matter which way they are bound.

The hearing should bring forth a large attendance and the Commissioners secure advice and suggestions from those who continually use the public highways.

Robert Gordon and P. H. Nelson, who left Boston in a Stevens-Duryea touring car, are now spending a few days in El Paso, Tex., prior to their departure for Los Angeles. J. W. Bowman, New England distributer for the Stevens, recently received a letter from the tourists, in which they complimented him most highly on the efficiency of the car, which they have driven from the far East to faraway Texas, and on which they have not spent one cent for adjustment or repairs. They have had no trouble whatever, and their trip so far has been one series of pleasures.

President Dunn of the Fisk Tire Company spent yesterday in Boston as the guest of local Manager George A. Campbell. Mr. Dunn said that the indications were that this will be the greatest year in the history of the industry, he basing that deduction on the large number of orders received for tires by this company.

Buffalo, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Albany and Boston will be the four largest cities touched by the American Automobile Association's touring contest for the Glidden trophy this year, and they will be reached in the order named. New York city will not be entered and New Jersey soil will not be entered and New Jersey soil will was changed on Monday so as to include Philadelphia and avoid New Jersey. Secretary Dai Lewis and his six-cylinder Premier pathfinder had reached the Delaware Water Gap, but Chairman F. B. Hower directed that they go back to Harrisburg and lay the route from there to Philadelphia. The big car, driven by Ray McNamara, did not get away from Harrisburg until nearly noon on Monday and did not reach Philadelphia until Tuesday night. Tuesday's run made the twelfth day out for the pathfinding car, but on the tour itself Philadelphia will be the stopping place on the night of the sixth day out, or the fifth day of travel, the Sunday previous being spent at Bedford Springs, Pa.

The reason for eliminating New Jersey from the route of this year's tour is the sandbagging motor law of the State. It was originally planned to run from Philadelphia to Atlantic City and spend Sunday at that resort. It would have cost the contestants about $13 license fee for each car, however, for the two days and so the State was avoided and instead of getting a reasonable fee, like other States, it will get nothing. Its principal resort there but for be minus several thousand dollars that the tourists would have spent there, but for the attitude of the State's law-makers toward those who use automobiles. From Philadelphia the route of the tour will be through the Delaware Water Gap and by way of Port Jervis into New York and up to Albany. Thence it will go through the most interesting parts of New England.

NEW WORLD'S RECORDS MADE ON SPEEDWAY

BY ED. COGSWELL.

World's records went kiting at the matinee of the Metropolitan Driving Club at Charles River Speedway in a way that startled even veteran horsemen. Just to think, Chase, 2:07¼, trotting his opening heat in a minute flat, the fastest time ever recorded for a trotter a half-mile on a speedway.

Then in one of the most brilliant finishes to be imagined the pacer Phoebon W., 2:08¾, just nipped the second heat in the final stride over Chase for the world's pacing record of 1:00¼.

But the afternoon of distinct features was not through, by a jugful, as in the third and final heat Chase came back strong and won in 1:00¼, making him the winner of the fastest three-heat race for half-miles on a speedway.

President C. H. Belleden of the club came off with all the glory in the contest with his trotter Chase, but he came nearly losing the laurels, as after the second heat he wished to withdraw from the race through being afraid that another heart-splitting heat like the first two would lay Chase on the shelf for the remainder of the season.

John Shepard, who owns half of the gelding with Mr. Belleden, then showed he was a true blue sportsman, for he went to Mr. Belleden and told him to go the third heat if the effort killed Chase. He had started in the race to win or lose on the speedway, and not lose in the stable, and that is the way he wanted to see the battle ended.

Mr. Belleden had not seen the matter in that light, having thought only of the horse, but he slipped on his driving gloves again and dipped into the fray with the zeal that pulled him off the winner. When the result of the race and remarkable time has been announced the spectators cheered both the president and Chase, and they well merited the credit.

The conditions for extreme speed could not have been bettered. Superintendent Gilman had the footing on the speedway in the pink of shape, the Spring air was just to the liking of the horses, and then the high wind swept down the course at the rate of thirty miles an hour directly in the rear of the contestants.

It is now the universal wish of the horse sporting public that George A. Graves bring his trotter Mack Mack, 2:08, over from Readville and tackle Chase. The two met last Fall, the latter winning the opening heat in 1:00¼, and then Mack Mack captured the race in 1:00¼ and the next heat in slower time. This is the only time that the two have met. With Mack Mack and Chase scheduled to meet, the speedway would hardly be large enough to accommodate the crowd that would turn out.

Then, too, the chestnut pacing gelding Murdel, owned and driven by W. F. Bennett, reeled off his race against Edith J., Billy F., Major P. and Billy Mack in 1:04 and 1:00¼, the second heat tieing the world's pacing record made earlier in the day by Phoebon W.

The Outcast, Ashland Bett and Queen Wilkes event was a scorcher, requiring four heats to decide. Fred H. Bellows landed Ashland Bett in the first by a hair in 1:03. Then B. W. Carpenter got Queen Wilkes to the wire by a close fit in 1:02¾. Now W. J. Furbush showed the timber which he is composed of as a teamster by nipping out the third in a desperate drive with Outcast in 1:03½, and came back in the fourth in just a second slower time with Ashland Bett right on her necktie.

The three-cornered trotting race between Red Bird, Geiger and Billy Ross furnished a tough struggle. F. C. Garmon had his mare right on edge, she winning the opening and third heats in 1:04, and 1:03½, the second heat going to W. S. Park's black gelding Geiger in 1:06¾. Billy Ross was far from the form he displayed last week and came third on each trip. Mr. Garmon had a right to feel very well pleased with his creditable victory.

Yet another trotter to march off a heat in 1:03½ was Rose Autograph, owned by T. H. Hubbard and driven by Walter Farmer. She was opposed to Goodspeed and Hills Boy. After taking the first in 1:05¼, she made a bad break in the second, which "Mon" Goodspeed secured with his namesake in 1:06 from Hills Boy. Mr. Farmer had Rose right to her business in the third with the result as before stated.

It sems almost a shame not to mention every winner of the day, so well did they perform. There was Alclay H., owned by Joe Doherty and driven by Dan Bigley, winning in 1:09½; Colbath (H. C. Reid), in 1:07; Lady Dreamer, the property of Arnold Lawson, who made her speedway debut, with Walter Farmer driving, winning in 1:12¼; Lady Pinewood (M. F. Maher), in 1:10¼; French Consol (A. W. Locke), in 1:11, and Dandelion (John Trout), in 1:08¼.

LIKELY COLTS PROCTOR HAS IN TRAINING

Bob Proctor, who brought out the $10,000 filly, The Leading Lady, last season, has a likely lot of futurity material at Readville track. The daughter of Bingen is, of course, getting a careful preparation for her three-year-old engagements. She looks very fit indeed and Proctor has lost none of the confidence that he has always had in the daughter of Miss Pratt, 2:17¼.

The two-year-old half-sister to The Leading Lady, named The Understudy, and by the futurity sire Moko, is a big, growthy filly, but Bob thinks she will make the racegoers sit up and take notice before the season is over.

In Charles Sanders' black gelding Uhlan, matinee record at three years, 2:13¾, he has about as good a prospect for the stakes as can be found in the ranks of green trotters. He has wintered finely and has developed into a very rugged horse. It is possible, however, that the gelding's owner may not race him except in amateur races the coming season.

Trainer Jimmy O'Donnell has a lot of good youngsters in training. In the bay filly Adula, by Aquilin, 2:19¾, he has one of the best prospects among the three-year-olds at the track. She trotted in 2:20 last season, is a very speedy filly and a rugged made one. She has every right to race well and go the route, as she is out of Eutaxia by Expedition, second dam Eventide (dam of Kremlin, 2:07¾), by Woodford Mambrino.

Ed. Bither is another trainer who has a bunch of well-bred youngsters in his stable.

He is particularly sweet on a two-year-old colt by Peter B. Bradley's fast and handsome young stallion Border Knight, a son of Bingen, out of a daughter of Peter the Great. Border Knight has been sent to Bither, after a short season in the stud, and will be staked.

Trainer Carroll is greatly pleased with the way his three-year-old colt by Baron Silver, from a daughter of Bingen, is working this Spring and will keep him paid up in all the futurity stakes in which he is named. Carroll also has a two-year-old filly by Guy Axworthy that he thinks so well of that he has been trying to make a match with some of the best of the age at the track, the race to be decided at Readville, July 4.

Henry Topham has a very likely three-year-old in the chestnut filly Agatha, by Aquilin.

NATIONAL BASEBALL GROUNDS, Cincinnati, May 14.—With one game apiece for the Reds and the Doves, the third clash scheduled to-day was bulletined as the live contest of the series, and the home fans were around early to get the good seats.

It was cloudy overhead, which raised a doubt that the game would be played, and added to those already on the list to be played later, but both Managers Ganzel and Kelley gave out the information that there would be a game unless it rained great guns.

A pitcher's battle was announced between those left-handed generals, "Little Cy" Young and Jake Weimer, and there was no doubting the character of the brand of twirling which would be handed out when that pair got to exchanging their wares.

The aggressive spirit of the Doves was asserted yesterday when Dan McGann was banished from the game, and some more scrappy moments were looked for by the local fans, who rather fancied the bristling manner of some of the new members of the visitors, as it added zest to the sport and gave the game more of an aspect of being a real run for victory than a friendly exhibition for exercise.

Kelley was not backward in announcing that he wanted at least half of the games in this burg, and to prevent him from gaining his ends it was evident that the Reds would have to play better ball than they had shown at any time during the season.

NEW YORK, May 13.—To-day is Metropolitan Handicap day. Eastern racing will be really launched on its career this afternoon when the gates of Belmont Park are thrown open. While the sport has been under way for several weeks at Aqueduct and Jamaica, those races are only figured as appetizers to the events to be contested at the "Newmarket of America." It is at this mammoth track that the leading members of the juvenile class as well as the best of the other divisions are trotted forth for public approval.

Fifteen Starters Carded.

Fifteen names have been sent out as possible starters out of the fifty-five that were nominated at the beginning of the year. Before post time arrives probably several will be withdrawn and the field will be composed of about one dozen.

Searching through the performances of the eligibles, it looks as if the finish of the Metropolitan should be McCarter, first; Jack Atkin, second, and Superman, third.

Taking up the case of McCarter, it is known that he can go this distance without any difficulty. He can run from behind as well as in front.

He will be well ridden by Phil Musgrave, and on the clever performance of this lad during the previous meeting, McCarter will be assured of a good ride.

McCarter was only started once this season. That was in the Excelsior, when he beat out Jack Atkin in a heart-breaking finish. In that race there was no doubt that McCarter was the best horse. He got off to a bad break and did not get running until he hit the backstretch. When he struck his stride, McCarter went through the field and started in a duel with Jack Atkin. The Schreiber horse had a big advantage over McCarter, in that he had enough races under his belt to get him in first-class shape. When it came down to the final drive McCarter showed his gameness by running head and head with Atkin and beating him in the final jump.

For this early in the season McCarter's race was phenomenal. He came out of the fray in good shape and will be a twenty pounds better horse this afternoon. Going back to last year's races it will be found that McCarter made the great Peter Pan run his fastest in the Brighton Handicap. In that memorable race McCarter set a heart-breaking pace from the start, and was only beaten by the Keene colt in the last jump. There is no horse in this race that can be figured within many lengths of Peter Pan.

CARDIO RECEIVES MOST AMATEUR VOTES IN CONTEST

There was a steady advance of all the contestants in the BOSTON AMERICAN baseball contest for the most popular professional and amateur player, the coupons of which are printed in the baseball editions every day. Not since the opening of the contest has the voting been so uniform clear through the list.

The only change of moment in the professional column was Kelley going into fifth position again and Parent dropping back to eighth, the latter being one of the few who was not remembered by his admirers in the last mails.

Just why so many casting coupons for their favorite professional player should leave blank the space for the popular amateur player is one of the mysteries. Certainly every true fan lives near a good amateur baseball team and should know some of the players. In the greater part of the votes cast yesterday for the professional no amateur was named. With the amateurs it is far different, it being very rare when the professional end of the coupon has not been filled in.

The three leaders of to-day in the amateur ranks received some over 400 votes each, but Sharry, who was third yesterday in the standing has dropped back to eighth through non-support, while Cardio goes into third place with a total of 451 coupons for the day, of which 268 came in two packages. This was the highest vote for any amateur for the preceding twenty-four hours. Reeves, Kewer, Hoernle and Keefe, by remaining about stationary in their votes, were forced backward in the rating. Following is the standing to date:

HARRY SCHAEFFER.

GEORGE G. IS TIPPED FOR READVILLE FREE-FOR-ALL

ALBANY, May 13.—Alta McDonald has a wonderful stable at Island Park track this year. His health has improved and although he has been obliged to turn down any number of requests to handle horses, what he has are looked upon as being something grand. George G. is regarded as being the candy kid among the trotters and Mr. McDonald expects him this year to show himself to be even faster than Major Delmar ever thought of being.

George G. will have his opportunity of showing what a really wonderful horse he is on July 4, when the great $5,000 free-for-all race comes off at Readville, Mass. He will go against Sonoma Girl, whose mark is the same as his, 2:05¼, and who the Crabtrees think will be a much faster horse than she was last year. George G. though looks so fit that unless an accident happens there is no questioning the fact that he will be worth while betting on.

Major Delmar has wintered well and looks fine. Last year he was unwell nearly all season and was never able to reach his right form. This year, though, McDonald looks to see him equal if not lower his trotting mark of 2:01¼ without a wind shield.

In the stable are two grand trotters that will bear watching. The speedy little Munic, who was counted upon as being even faster than Highball or Sonoma Girl, is strong and fit now. If he can be gotten to the races this year there is going to be something doing. McDonald's second trotting prospect is also in the same class with Munic and is being staked extensively down the big line. She is owned by James McClenahan of Putnam, and Mr. McClenahan has thought so much of her that he offered to back her against any trotter in the world, barring George G., on a half-mile track.

James Parker of Salem, has staked his gray pacer, Fred D., in the Grand Circuit and if the gray holds up to his achievement of a mile under a pull at Providence last Summer of 2:05¾, he should be of some account in the Grand Circuit. He wintered fine. George Downer will again drive for Mr. Parker.

Billy "Dusty" Miller is at Rensselaer Park, Troy. He has Kate Baronmore, 2:17¼; Dick Latcher, 2:13¼, and Charley Schifferdecker's trotter, Daisy Mack, principal among his string.

Harry Pappalau is counting on getting the money this year with his pacer, Mary Eta, that was once the property of George E. Whitney of Enfield, N. H., and was barely beaten at Woodlawn Park last Summer by Easter Direct in fast time.

BASE STEALING IS NOT DANGEROUS IF DONE RIGHT, HUGH JENNINGS DECLARES

Hughey Jennings, always one of the be base runners in the game and with hard an equal in touching runners trying f second base when he was with the Balt more club, spoke to-day of the science base running and incidentally of the li bility of a player being injured by spike in this way:

"Base sliding is not dangerous when th player knows how to do it, and spikes ar not dangerous when the player knows ho to handle the man that is coming in. Th great success in saving yourself in bas running is to slide when you start to d it. Never hesitate. The man who start a slide and tries to stop is a goner sure if he doesn't break an ankle he is lucky. The base runner should throw all his strength into the slide and he won't get hurt.

"I recall that we always had half a dozen files in the Baltimore club house to sharpen our spikes with.

"The diamond there was especially hard and rough and the spikes wore down easily, so we had to sharpen them every day. But we did not let the opposing club know that was the reason.

"Two or three of them would come out to the club house and they'd find the crowd sitting on the benches filing away at their spikes, the rasping noise filling the room as though it were a machine shop.

"'Look out for us to-day,' was always the admonition, and of course, they went away pretty well determined to take no chances with us on the bases.

Little Chance of Injury.

"As a matter of fact, there is hardly any chance of an infielder being spiked if he plays his game right and the runner is only trying to get to the base. No matter how a base runner goes into a bag, he cannot hurt the infielder if the latter is in the right position. McGraw, as often as every opponent on the field tried to get him, was never spiked until Dick Harley handed it to him when he had no reason to do so. McGraw always made the base slider carry him into the bag.

"The only man who has a chance to get hurt by spikes in baseball, if he is playing his game the way he should, is the first sacker. He must keep his foot on the bag, and he is therefore bound to get nipped more or less.

"But nobody wants to hurt a first baseman. In present day baseball I don't know of one of them who is at all offensive. They are almost always, for some reason or other, good, big-hearted chaps that nobody would purposely hurt. Of them all in the American League I know of but one who might invite trouble and that is Jiggs Donohue.

"Donohue and I had several rows last year and we told each other pretty plainly what we were thinking, I guess. But Jiggs proved himself a man every inch of him after the season was over when he came to our hotel during the world series, talked to the boys, advised them and encouraged them. We buried the hatchet after that.

"Nobody wants to hurt a first baseman. It's a sort of unwritten law that, as the poor chap must keep his foot there, it isn't fair to cut him. Matty McIntyre, for instance, would have played all last year if he hadn't turned his ankle to save Bob Unglaub.

King Kelly's Bet.

"King Kelly once offered to bet Jack Crooks $5 that he could give him the ball, be ten feet away from the bag and make it without being touched. He was so clever in dodging one way when the fielder expected him to go the opposite they couldn't touch him. Crooks declined to take the bet. He knew Kelly could do it.

"Famous as Kelly was for his work on the bases, Ty Cobb is a better base runner, for Ty has more speed and is equally tricky in getting around the man with the ball.

"Watching the guardian of the sack, of course, is the great trick in base sliding. You can usually tell by the way he is standing which direction the ball is coming from, and it is your cue to go the opposite way. But even in this there is always the chance of being outgeneraled. It's an old trick of the fielder to hold his hands on his hips and pretend the ball is not coming toward him. You go slow to your slide, and he suddenly becomes animated, grabs the ball and tags you. Or he will lean in one direction for the ball and then dodge over and take it from another, and, unless you can outguess him, he has you."

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Yes it looks as if the Tigers were in the hunt for the pennant again.

If Sam Crawford hadn't banged out that triple at the worst minute it might have meant extra innings with a toss up for the wreath.

Jennings still retains all that steam he showed last season, but his voice is a trifle tied up from overwork.

He keeps pretty well inside the rules allowed the coacher, as Silk O'Loughlin has his weather eye on him all the time.

Groundkeeper Jerome will not have to use the lawnmower on the plots behind first and third as Hughey will keep it short by the way he started in picking off the grass.

If the home team could only cut out those breaks which invariably come along, especially early in the contests, they would have a better chance to lead the way.

The first score the Tigers got was a pure gift and the odd thing about it was that all the runs made by the Tigers came after two were down. Bill Carrigan showed the Tigers a thing or two when they tried to steal on him. He nailed the first three who went down and got them scared.

The Tigers will be the guests of Harry W. Davis of the Rose Stahl Company at the Park Theatre on Thursday night. Harry is an old friend of H[illegible] Jennings and one of his strongest [illegible]ers.

Cicotte seemed to have t[illegible] tamed, for seven innings, as onl[illegible] safe hits were punched out. But [illegible] next round was a bad one.

The little knuckle ball pitcher[illegible] made good with a hit at the ri[illegible] in the fifth and tied the score by [illegible] Wagner across the plate.

Eddie Siever had all his best wares with him, fanning seven. He made monkeys out of some of the left handers.

McCall, 2b.	Pennock, s. s.
Dana, l. f.	Michaels, r. f.
Aronson, r. f.	Kane, 2b.

Harvard and Amherst meet on the diamond at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Harvard will try a new batting order. Leonard will lead off as usual, but will be followed by Lanigan, who was fourth on the list. Currier comes next and then Harvey, who has been swatting the ball well. Briggs is next, with Simons, McCall, Dana and Aronson following in order.

Aronson will play for the first time since his injury received at Annapolis. Lanigan has been chosen to pitch, and the way the little chap put them over in the Bates game it is a pretty sure thing that he will do his share toward pulling out the game.

DOVE BROWNE AND RED SOX WAGNER GAIN

The feature of the batting of the Boston teams yesterday was the work of Browne of the Doves and Wagner of the Red Sox. The former jumped from .181 to .216, while the latter went from .177 to .212. The averages:

NEW OWNERS FOR HORSES AT SPEEDWAY

F. W. Hunnewell of Portland, Me., dropped down to the Metropolitan Driving Club with his trotter Major Dillon, 2:30½, stepped him down the course a couple of times, and then traded him with John Trout for the pacer Robert P., that set tongues wagging at Franklin Field Speedway last Saturday by winning in 31¼s., pulled up.

E. S. Morse had a liking for Robert P. and began negotiations with Mr. Hunnewell, with the result that he bought the pacer and he is now being trained for a trip over the half-mile tracks by B. F. Delano at Combination Park. This closed Mr. Hunnewell out and he returned home a happy man.

Then Mr. Morse, to keep the ball rolling, sold for $800, his trotting gelding, Dewey Dumas, to a member of the Manchester, N. H., Driving Club, who is to have him fitted for the races there this season.

Knapp Foshner is not far behind when it comes to spotting a good trotter and as the consequence he nailed Silver Wilkes, 2:24¼, right off the handle, owning now one of the cleverest and speediest horses at Charles River Speedway.

This only goes to prove that the members of the Metropolitan not only put up the best racing of any driving club in the country, but they are ever on the alert to increase their fun strings with trotters and pacers when the opportunity arises.

SON-IN-LAW OF BRYAN BEATEN IN PARIS PLOT

Artist Leavitt Pluckily Defends Himself and Breaks His Assailant's Skull.

PART OF BLACKMAIL PLAN

By Vance Thompson.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, May 13.—Repelling a desperate attack made upon him by a former model, William Homer Leavitt, son-in-law of William J. Bryan, to-day defended himself with an iron hammer, beating his assailant so severely over the head that his skull was crushed and he lies in a serious condition at a hospital here. Before he could get the better of the model, Mr. Leavitt was beaten about the head and the bones of his left hand were crushed by the blows of a club.

The attack was made in the court yard of Mr. Leavitt's studio in the Rue Falguieres and followed what Mr. Leavitt claims has been an attempt to persecute him by friends of the model. He claims his life is still in danger and is now carrying a gun.

Leavitt Claims Murder Plot.

The model, whose name is Canna, is under arrest. Leavitt, after making the complaint, went immediately to the American Embassy and through Mr. White's intervention obtained permission to carry a revolver. He declares the model's attack was part of a plot to murder him, in which others are engaged.

Leavitt returned to Paris four months ago, and began work on a large picture ordered by the municipality of Antwerp for the decoration of the Town Hall. His mother is with him, and they have been living at a pension in the Rue Boissonade, near the studio.

A few weeks ago Canna appeared and asked to be taken as a model. After a day's trial, Leavitt dismissed and paid him, having found his posing unsatisfactory. Three days later Canna returned and told a pathetic tale of a starving wife and children and begged for assistance. The artist was touched by his story and gave up twenty dollars. The next week Canna came back and demanded a similar amount. On this occasion Leavitt's friend, a banker from Antwerp named Hill, was present. He advised that no money be given, but as the model pleaded that he had nothing to eat, Leavitt gave him an order on a grocer. Canna ran up a bill of nine dollars.

Women Models Besiege Studio.

Then the persecution began. Leavitt does not use women models, but every day, almost every hour, his studio was besieged with women and girls who forced their way in and tried to pose.

On Friday Canna appeared, carrying an eighteen-months-old baby, and demanded $20. The artist refused indignantly, whereupon Canna said: "Then I shall leave the baby."

Leavitt protested, declaring the baby was an entire stranger to him, but he says he paid to avoid taking charge of the child.

Canna came again, and when Leavitt refused to give one penny more he drew a long knife from his coat sleeve and attempted to stab the artist. After a severe struggle Leavitt succeeded in capturing the knife, which is still in his possession, and throwing the murderous model out of the studio.

To-day Leavitt and his mother were together in the studio when Canna knocked and was refused admittance. Thereupon he broke all the windows.

In spite of his mother's entreaties Leavitt went out and remonstrated. Canna immediately began beating him over the head with a club. The artist went back into the studio and secured a heavy iron hammer. Running out into the courtyard he found Canna still there, bombarding the windows.

Canna got in the first blow, smashing the artist's left hand, but he fell a moment later under a well-directed blow from the hammer.

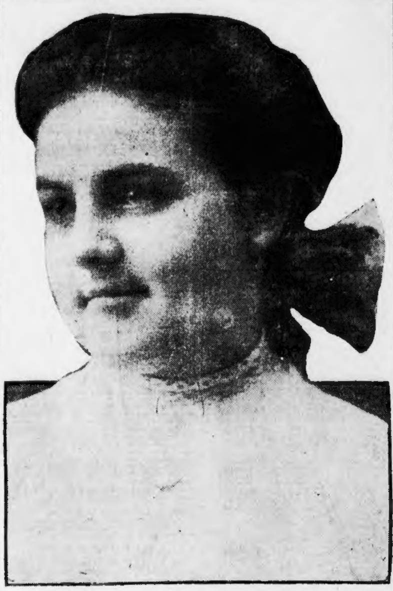
IDA ROY, MISSING SCHOOL GIRL



FEARS HARM HAS BEFALLEN MISSING GIRL

Mother, Grieving for Pretty Daughter, Appeals for Aid in Search.

HINT CAREER OF ACTRESS

SALEM, May 13.—Crying: "Oh, why should Ida leave us? She always had a happy home here and we did everything we could to please her," Mrs. Joseph Roy of Glendale street, this city, to-day asked the BOSTON AMERICAN to help her find her fifteen-year-old daughter, Ida Roy, who has disappeared mysteriously.

That the young girl, who was really very pretty and bright, has run away to try to get an engagement with some theatrical company is the belief of many Salem people. Not so the father and mother of the missing girl.

"I have no idea why Ida should leave home," said the mother between sobs today to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "We have always done everything that we could for our little girl. There was no reason for her to go away. She always seemed contented and happy, and I fear that some harm may have befallen her.

"Ida's disappearance is the worst blow I have ever had. My husband is equally affected. We both hope and pray that no harm will befall her. I hope that the BOSTON AMERICAN will help us find our girl. We will gladly welcome her if she comes back. Oh, I hope she will come when she knows how her absence has broken her parents' hearts."

Mr. and Mrs. Roy have been making every effort to get some clew to the girl's whereabouts. They have asked the police of Salem to communicate with the authorities of all New England towns and cities in hope that they may have their daughter restored to them.

It was last Thursday that Ida was missed by her parents. They thought that she had probably gone home from school with some of her girl friends, but when the next day came and their daughter was still missing they started to search for her.

DARING BANDITS LOOT EXPRESS CAR OF $50,000

SEATTLE, Wash., May 13.—Bandits executed a $50,000 train robbery in Seattle to-day as Great Northern passenger train No. 274, known as The Vancouver local, ran through the tunnel underneath the city. The robbers beat J. Elmer Perrine, the express messenger, into insensibility, bound and gagged him, and then made good their escape with the loot, save a valise containing $200 in nickels, which, proving too heavy to carry, was dumped in a clump of bushes on the west side of Queen Anne hill.

While the Great Northern Express Company, which had charge of the money, and the railroad officials give out the amount stolen as between $5,000 and $6,000, there is good reason to believe the amount will be fully $50,000. To-day the express company posted a reward of $2,500 for the capture of the robbers, for it is known there were at least two and possibly four engaged in the work. This reward will be augmented, doubtless, by other rewards from the city, county and State.

For daring and boldness of execution, the work stands out uniquely in railroad train robberies. The robbers began operations as the Great Northern train at 8:10 this morning pulled out of the Union Station and into the tunnel, the Southern mouth of which opens into the station yards.

It was while the train was running the length of this one-mile tunnel that Express Messenger Perrine was so brutally beaten. At the time of their descent upon him he was bending over the open strong box holding a six-shooter in his hand, but this weapon they wrenched from his grasp and used it as a club with telling effect. Their work done, the robbers jumped from the train just north of the northern portal of the tunnel and made their escape.

Pinkertons, railroad and police detectives are swarming over the city to-day. Their theory is that the robbers are still in Seattle.

OPEN CAPITOL FRAUD TRIAL

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 13.—The presentation of the State's case to the jury in the second of the trials for alleged "grafting" in the furnishing of the new capitol, with Congressman H. Burd Cassel, Architect Joseph M. Huston and Schumaker, Snyder, Mathues and Irvine, former State officials, as defendants, was [illegible] James Scarlett, special counsel for the Commonwealth.

The strongest point made by Scarlet was that the facts to be brought out in testimony clearly prove a conspiracy to defraud the State.

BOY ESCAPES DEATH AS IF BY MIRACLE

Caught by Trolley and Fender, Turns Somersault in Air and Falls on Fender.

Dodging an automobile, nine-year-old Archie Curtin of No. 961 Massachusetts avenue, while on his way home from school at noon to-day, jumped in front of a Lowell trolley car at Massachusetts avenue and Brattle street, Arlington, was struck by the fender, thrown into the air, landed on the fender again and escaped with a scalp wound. Passengers characterized his escape from death or serious injury as marvellous.

The car was going at good speed and struck the lad with such force that after being tossed into the air he turned a complete somersault. Then he fell lengthwise upon the fender and was carried fifty feet before the car was brought to a stop.

There was considerable excitement among the passengers. Young Curtin, more scared than hurt, was taken to a physician's office and after having his wound dressed was removed to his home. The boy is the son of a well-known Arlington expressman.

LOAN SHARKS MUST KEEP WITHIN LAW

Methods Bared in Court Fight Taken Up by Attorney Osgood.

DEFENDANT IS SUSTAINED

The methods by which some loan brokers, commonly called "money sharks," bleed borrowers is well illustrated by the suit of the Kilby Investment Company against John M. Harris, in which, according to a notice just received by Attorney William N. Osgood of No. 6 Beacon street, judgment will be rendered for the defendant on Friday by Judge Michael J. Murray in the Municipal Court.

Harris, who was represented in court by Mr. Osgood, on May 12, 1907, borrowed $40 from the loan company with which to pay fees to put him through bankruptcy. He paid $10 within a few days and gave a number of new notes monthly thereafter.

After he had paid $62.50 the Kilby Investment Company brought suit to recover a balance of about $30 alleged to be due, with interest unestimated, and attorney's fees of $25.

Forbidden by Police Rules.

The statutes of Massachusetts and the rules of the Boston police department allow a charge of 24 per cent. per annum on loans of less than $50. Attorney Osgood argued at the trial that the amounts demanded would be far in excess of this legal rate. The renewal of notes, with charges for making and securing the loan in the new notes, is expressly forbidden by the police rules. All sums paid in excess of the prescribed amounts shall be deemed to be interest, according to law.

According to the evidence produced in court, Mr. Harris, after paying $10, gave a new note for $34 every month for seven months. This would mean $30 plus $4 for fees. He also paid $8 for four months, making $32. He paid $4 per month for four months, making $16. An additional payment of $4.50 was also made by Mr. Harris in January.

Mr. Harris testified that every time he signed a note one of the persons in the company's office would pass him $30 and he would hand it right back. This, according to the argument of Mr. Osgood, was to evade the ruling that notes shall not be renewed. Attorney Warren, for the loan company, held that each new note constituted an entirely new transaction, and that the case was based on the last note, signed December 2, 1907.

Find Relief in Court.

"I feel especially pleased at the judgment which is to be rendered in this case," said Attorney Osgood to an AMERICAN reporter to-day, "as it shows that though loan brokers in the past have won suits they have brought against their customers, no matter whether or not their charges were legal, the courts will not sustain illegal charges if the borrowers only take the matter into court.

"In this case the interest actually paid and demanded would amount to something like 60 per cent., whereas the law allows but 24 per cent. The last note, which I argued was only a renewal, called for attorney's fees of $25. Neither the law nor the police rules permit of any such charge for attorney's fees, nor anything for protest fees. The broker may charge the legal rate of interest, plus $3 in this case for making and securing the loan, and all additional sums paid or demanded shall be deemed to be interest.

Calls It Subterfuge.

"Counsel for the plaintiff said that the $30 was handed out to the defendant as 'additional security.' I told the court that this was simply a subterfuge, to make what was really one of a series of notes appear as an entirely new contract."

Mr. Osgood has been active for several years in a campaign against illegal charges by loan concerns, and at this session of the Legislature still has pending a bill to regulate their charges. The Committee on Legal Affairs reported to the House a measure drafted along the lines suggested by him, which, it is thought, will pass both Houses.

PLAY ENDS IN DEATH.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 13.—While playing on the banks of Scott's Pond, near Lonsdale, Henry McCrystal, son of Edward McCrystal, aged three and one-half years, fell into the water and was drowned. His two little companions were unable to save him. The body was recovered.

BOY, 15, WEDS GIRL AGED 12

WHITESBURG, Ky., May 13.—One of the most unique weddings in the history of eastern Kentucky occurred on Upper Rock Creek in this county when young Leonard Hall, barely fifteen, son of Elder Joe Hall, a Hardshell minister, was married to little Miss Annie Profitt, scarcely twelve years, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Profitt, a poor widow.

10,000 DEAD BY TIDAL WAVE

SEATTLE, Wash., May 13.—A tidal wave in the Yangtse Kiang River swept 10,000 persons to death at Hankow, China, according to news brought by the steamer Titan. The entire river section of Hankow was destroyed, including several thousand stores and many junks.

The Day Looks Different After a Cascaret

No need of those days when you are not at your best.

Headache and dullness are generally due to the bowels.

You know that, but you put off the treatment till night. That is wrong, for it means the waste of a day.

A single Cascaret, taken the moment you need it, makes everything right very soon.

You will feel in an hour as you hope to feel the next morning.

You can't use harsh cathartics and pills in that way.

They irritate the bowels and cause griping. The pain is worse than the headache.

But Cascarets never gripe.

Tens of thousands of people carry our vest-pocket box. They take a Cascaret whenever the skies look gray.

One ten-cent box saves, in this way, six unpleasant days.

You will do likewise when you try the plan once. And you'll be glad that we told you about it.

Please begin today.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The box is marked like this:

Cascarets
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

The vest-pocket box is 10 cents.
The month-treatment box 50 cents.

POLICE SEEK NEW MAN IN MULLINS CASE

Mysterious Caller on Dead Girl Shortly Before Her Death Is Wanted.

'MURDERED,' SAYS JUDGE

In their efforts to unravel the mystery surrounding the death of Annie Mullins, the pretty Newfoundland girl whose murdered body was found in Squires field, Arlington, the police of that town and of the city of Cambridge are to-day bending every effort to find the strange man whom Grocer George Teague of Lexington found in the Von Jagemann kitchen with the girl just two days before she was killed.

Of this man the police authorities have no very complete description, for Grocer Teague, thinking Annie Mullins and this stranger were friends, quickly excused himself and left the Von Jagemann premises that Wednesday afternoon in March. Teague, however, says the man was large, red-faced, and he thinks he had a reddish mustache.

Judge's Verdict Approved.

The verdict of Justice Arthur P. Stone, who conducted the inquest in the case, that Annie Mullins came to her death at the hands of some person unknown and which disproved the declaration of Medical Examiner William D. Swan that the girl had taken her own life, is approved by Chief Thomas O. D. Urquhart of the Arlington police and Chief Inspector Patrick J. Hurley of Cambridge, who have all along believed that the girl was murdered.

The police want this man who was talking with Annie Mullins in the Von Jagemann kitchen to come forward now and explain why he was there. If he would do so it would help them not a little in their probing in the case.

It has been found that one suspect in the case did not work on this Wednesday afternoon, March 25. The police are still hard at work on the details of the case and trying to discover other clues that will help them in the accumulatation of evidence.

The statement of a woman witness in the case, whose name is withheld, that on the night of the murder she saw a woman looking very like Annie Mullins, walking in Cedar street with a man a half a head taller than the girl, has caused the police to delve deeper into the mystery of the man who visited her in the kitchen two days before the murder.

The woman says this mysterious man was about five feet ten inches in height, had a red face, a moustache, and wore a mixed gray raincoat and a black derby hat.

The police are still working over a rather broad field, for they are possessed of much information that compels this. One suspect in the case, who has been watched night and day since the discovery of the crime, has carried himself in a manner calculated to disarm suspicion. He has been faithful at his work, and has done nothing further to direct suspicion toward himself.

In his finding Judge Stone, in making his conclusions upon the evidence he secured at the inquest, says:

"From the evidence in the case, including the absence of any weapon at or near the body, the absence of any motive for suicide, the appearance of the deceased, the condition of the ground around where the body was found, and other facts that appeared at the inquest, I do not think it probable that this was a case of suicide.

"I, therefore, find that the said Annie Mullins came to her death on Friday, March 27, A. D. 1908, at Arlington, through a hemorrhage resulting from her throat being cut by a sharp instrument in the hands of some person or persons to me unknown."

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

Fire Losses on Pianos

A slight blistering of the cases by the heat is quickly remedied—a thorough scraping and rubbing down and revarnishing in our repair dept. makes the piano as good as new—a thorough inspection of all the parts, and then our expert tuner completes the job—then the beautiful piano is sent to our sacrifice floor and the economical buyer gets a fine instrument for almost nothing. All makes have been coming in—the best pianos in the world—and are sacrificed at once.

CITY OF BOSTON.

CITY OF BOSTON.

In Board of Street Commissioners.

May 11, 1908.

The Board of Street Commissioners will give a public hearing in the Aldermanic Chamber at City Hall on Thursday next, May 14, at 11 o'clock a. m., under the provisions of Chapter 447 of the Acts of the Legislature of 1908, being "An Act Relative to the Regulation of Street Traffic in the City of Boston."

It is the intention of the Board to pass rules and regulations governing the use of public streets by vehicles of every description wherever necessary under the terms of said Chapter 447.

At Thursday's hearing special consideration will be given to the question of providing in the rules to be adopted that in certain streets, such as School, Bromfield and Winter streets, vehicles shall pass through these streets in one direction only, and that there shall be no loading or unloading of bulky and heavy packages of merchandise, the delivery of coal, ice, etc., and the removal of waste during certain fixed hours of the day. For the Board of Street Commissioners,

Giving the New Haven Road a Chance

It's a BIG Lawbreaker, So It Must Have Time to GET THE LAW CHANGED

Acting Governor Draper has a duty as well as an opportunity in the present railroad situation.

He is the acting Governor of the Commonwealth. He has the duty to enforce the law. He has the POWER to enforce the law.

The law is being transgressed. The New Haven Railroad is the transgressor. The highest court in the Commonwealth has pointed to the wrong-doing of the New Haven and has indicated the way to correct it.

The New Haven Railroad has boldly proclaimed its right as a foreign corporation to do in Massachusetts those things which a railroad is forbidden to do by the laws of this State.

This impertinent doctrine the Supreme Court has flung back in the teeth of the New Haven financiers who are seeking illegally to control the transportation systems of New England. By the court's decision, their own attorney admits, THEY ARE HOLDING THE BOSTON & MAINE STOCK CONTRARY TO LAW.

This attorney declares that the New Haven will heed the decision. But if the assurances of Mr. Choate and Mr. Mellen are of no more value now than they have been in the past, the New Haven will hold that stock as long as it can, law or no law.

Mr. Draper, you are the acting Governor. Do you doubt your duty?

If an officer of the law finds that a man has stolen goods in his possession he seizes them at once. No LITTLE man is allowed to continue a known violation of the law longer than it takes the process of the law to stop him.

You are given the power to enforce the law through your Attorney General. You believe in uniformity of the law as it relates to trout fishing. You took the time and the trouble to investigate and veto a TROUT law because it made a distinction between the privileges of a FEW TROUT FISHERMEN.

Do you not believe that there should be the same law for the New Haven that exists for some smaller transgressor?

Months ago the AMERICAN called the attention of the Attorney General to the violation of the law by the New Haven and it took ninety-six days of reminders thereafter before the law department began to act.

The Supreme Court's decision is a shot in the air unless the executive department, of which you are the acting chief executive, puts the machinery of that department in motion.

Do you propose to act at all, Mr. Draper?

Do you propose to wait until the horse has been stolen before you lock the barn door?

Do you propose to wait until the New Haven has acted upon the Legislature in the customary manner to legalize the New Haven's wrong-doing?

Your duty is clear. So is your opportunity.

Do You Own Any Land?

If Not, You Can't Call Yourself A FREE MAN

Look out for the real estate sharks—there are many of them.

Beware of fake real estate schemes—there are many of them.

But buy real estate, the right kind, at the right place, and hold it.

We repeat to-day what we have said before, and what we shall say over and over again, this year and probably next year.

THE WISE MAN WILL BUY AND HOLD A PIECE OF THIS EARTH FOR HIMSELF. Land can be bought cheaply. The piece of ground on which you build your home makes you an independent man. Unless you own your home, you are not much better than a modern, rent-paying serf.

The chances to buy real estate advantageously are numerous and extraordinary at present. The foolish, needless panic has affected land as it has affected everything else, although, as usual, land suffers less than anything else in panicky times.

You can buy lots for a trifle to-day near Forest Hills, or not far from Mattapan square, or in the vicinity of Blue Hill avenue and not a great way from the Charles River. You will be able to get to Forest Hills, for instance, in a few months, when the Terminal is completed, in quicker time than you could get to Dudley street twenty years ago.

When you look around Boston you can see transportation is getting better every year. It is better now than it was ten years ago, and it is certain to be better in a few years to come.

The elevated to Sullivan Square has developed property within a radius of ten miles beyond. People who bought land there, some years ago, are seeing their wisdom to-day.

If you use ordinary intelligence and caution now you can buy land near Boston that will give you the site of a comfortable, healthy home at once and that will bring you back many times your money in twenty years or less, GIVING YOU THE PROFIT JUST WHEN YOU MOST NEED IT.

But BE CAUTIOUS. Don't buy in an excited moment. Take your time to think it over. Study all the advertisements, hear all that the owners have to say. THERE'S PLENTY OF LAND, IT WON'T GET AWAY FROM YOU. If you are not QUITE satisfied, look at something else. Don't be afraid of a reasonable walk from the railroad station or trolley, BUT DON'T BUY LAND SO FAR AWAY THAT YOU CAN'T LIVE ON IT.

Keep within your means; don't undertake payments unless you are sure you can make them. Study maps. Look at the general direction of travel. Get one or two friends to go out with you and buy lots with you and build with you, if you possibly can.

If you can afford it, buy enough land for your own home and as much more. When you build your own house and live there YOU WILL DOUBLE THE VALUE OF THE OTHER LOT, making yourself richer. BUT DON'T GO BEYOND YOUR MEANS.

And don't be discouraged if you can't buy a lot for $400 to-day and sell it for $800 to-morrow. You might buy it for $400 to-day and be unable to sell it even for $200 to-morrow. That doesn't mean anything. It is the long run that counts. Make sure that your judgment is sound, and then hang on, keeping within your means.

Lotta Crabtree, the famous actress, was persuaded to buy some lots on the south side of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street in New York City, and they coaxed her into paying two or three thousand dollars apiece for them. This seemed to her and her friends such an outrageous swindle that a suit was brought to compel the sellers to take the lots back at cost price.

YOU COULDN'T BUY ONE OF THOSE LOTS TO-DAY FOR $100,000.

Be cautious, conservative, hesitate, don't hurry, but buy land.

WOULDN'T IT MAKE YOU MAD---

Extravagance of Our Women

Makes Marriage a Problem

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal-Examiner

HAS a young man of twenty-seven, with a steady income of $35 a week, any right to marry a girl who has always had a home of comparative luxury, with all that her heart could wish? They love each other dearly. He has $1,000 in the bank. But he knows so little of what it would take to satisfy all the reasonable and sensible wants of a woman used to such a life that he hesitates to take the step, even though she be anxious. With good health and an absolute certainty of a continuance of this income, would marriage be wise or unwise?

WHEN we stop to consider how few, how very few of the great masses of intelligent and refined families in the world have $35 a week to count upon as an absolute certainty, and how many live comfortably and easily upon less, much less, the young man's question seems absurd.

But when we realize what an American girl brought up in luxury might be led to expect of the man she married, and how incapable she might be of using his weekly stipend wisely, we do not wonder that he hesitates.

It all depends wholly and entirely upon the order of girl she may be.

If she knows how to use money to the best advantage, how to buy food and clothing, how to use both properly, where to save and when to be free-handed, then this couple ought to be able to live happily and comfortably on $35 a week.

That Ogre, Rent

IF they live in a large city, the grim ogre, rent, would make a sad inroad upon that income.

It is to be hoped that the day is not far off when a more just and sensible and humane order of things will exist, which shall do away with this awful and devastating question of rent.

God never intended human beings to sell their very souls to pay for the air they breathe and the spot of earth they lie down upon, any more than He intended the fish in the sea to pay for the water they dwell in.

We have been robbed of our rightful inheritance—the earth—but it must come back to our descendants in time. In the meanwhile the question of marriage for young men in cities is a serious one.

The awful extravagance, everywhere about us, is contagious, and it requires the wisdom of a philosopher and the self-denial of an adept to rise above it. Women really sensible at heart and anxious to do the right thing for their families are yet affected by the atmosphere of luxury which permeates the land, and are led into folly and extravagance which bring ruin and disgrace.

It is this order of woman who frequently drives her husband into being a defaulter or a forger.

Almost invariably behind every great crime committed for money stands the extravagant wife or mistress.

Knowing all this, my correspondent is justified in thinking carefully before he establishes a home.

But if he is sure that he has found the right kind of a woman, he is safe to proceed.

THE WHITE HOUSE GAZETTE

WEX JONES—EDITOR.

Vol. 1. Washington, Wednesday——May 9, 1908. No. 21

EDITORIAL

For the first time in our career we find in the reptile press, which is controlled either by Undesirables or Predatories, a proper appreciation of ourself. The appreciation, from the Emporia Gazette, is:

> He is the press and the people, the sultan who rules the Turks; he is the bell in the steeple and he is the whole blamed works. He is the hill and valley, the dawning, the dusk, the noon; he is the large white alley, he is the man in the moon. He is the soothing slumber, he is the soul awake; he is the big cucumber that gives us the belly-ache. He is the fire that quickens, the company that insures; he is the ill that sickens, and he is the thing that cures. He is the ruling Russian and we are the groveling skates; he is the Constitution and he's the United States.

Good, but unfortunately not nearly full enough. There is nothing about shooting grizzlies in it.

Secretary Taft's absence only makes the Taft sentiment grow stronger.—Baltimore American.

Must recall him.

The Editor of the Gazette is going to bury himself in the wilds of Africa pretty soon. We are sick of getting up in a street car to give our seat to a lady and having every man in the car say, "There's the Editor of the Gazette," and offer us his seat.

By the way, we notice that if we get up to offer the Presidential seat to a fat man, there's no hesitancy on the part of thin ones about scrambling for it.

His Dreadful Vengeance

OUR GREAT SERIAL STORY

By C. B. QUINCY

SUMMARY OF PRECEDING ROUND—The Senators beat it on the delivery of a message from the Editor.

CHAPTER II.

With a smile like a baby teething, the Editor sprang upon his bronco, and whirling his lariat about his head he set off in pursuit of the fleeing Senators. Lassoing them one by one—to the great annoyance of Jeff Davis, who was wroth at being captured by a puny editor, besides being afraid of having his quivering flesh gnawed off his trembling bones—he took them to the dungeon beneath the boxing ring in the White House.

With the helpless Senators bound hand and foot, our hero proceeded to read to them two messages, three extraordinary messages, ten special messages and twelve special extra messages.

One by one the Senators, all but Senator Beveridge, fainted under the terrible strain. As for Beveridge, he applauded every telling passage* and cheered the author to the echo.

In five hours all the other Senators were dead!

Senator Beveridge was then released and placed in charge of the "four Presidential yachts a year" movement.

THE END.

(*And there were many of them.—Ed.)
